"residuary legatee." E. left real estate not specifically devised:—Held: the real estate not specifically devised passed to S. as residuary devisee as well as legatee.—Re SALTER, FARRANT v. CARTER (1881), 44 L. T. 603.

6092. ——.]—It is well settled that the words "residuary legatee" by themselves primâ facie do not apply to real estate, though their application may be extended so as to do so when the context requires it, & when testator directs his real estate to be sold & disposes of part of the proceeds, it may be taken, I think, that the appointment of a residuary legatee will pass the rest. The phrase "all else to be sold," however, in this will, having regard to the position in which it occurs, cannot, I think, be fairly considered to have any application to real estate, but only to furniture & chattels, especially as the real estate of testatrix is all of it specifically disposed of by preceding clauses (JOYCE, J.).—Re GIBBS, MARTIN v. HARDING, [1907] 1 Ch. 465; 76 L. 6160. ——.]—Testatrix, by her will, after reciting that she was entitled under the marriage settlement of her granddaughter to a fund, subject to the life interest of A. gave all her "reversionary interest" in the fund to trustees, upon trust, on the determination of the interest of A., to stand possessed thereof upon the like trusts & with the same powers, so far as applicable, for any issue of A. by any future wife as were declared in the settlement for any issue of A. by his late wife, testatrix's said granddaughter. Testatrix declared that A. might by will or codicil appoint that the income of the fund should be paid to any future wife of his during her life or for any less period, & that, in default of issue attaining a vested interest, the fund should be held upon trust for A. absolutely; & testatrix gave the residue of her property in trust for A. absolutely.

By a codicil, testatrix, in lieu of the trusts in her will as to residuary estate, declared that the trustees should pay the income thereof to B. for life, & after his death should hold the same upon the like trusts in favour of A. & his issue, & with the same powers in all respects as were contained in her will with reference to her reversionary interest under the settlement, & as if the same were repeated in the codicil. A. married a second wife. B. subsequently died. A. then claimed the income of testatrix's residuary estate accrued since the death of B. The ct. decided that, although there was no express disposition of the income after A.'s death during the remainder of his life, such income would nevertheless belong to the parties who might eventually become entitled to the corpus, since a future gift of residue carried with it previous income not expressly disposed of, & that it must therefore be accumulated for the possible children of A. by his then marriage who might attain a vested interest therein.—Re LINDO, ASKIN v. FERGUSON (1888), 59 L. SECT. 17.—DESCRIPTION OF DONEES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

6164. Presumption against taking by person not in esse—Unless intention plainly to contrary.]—Testator gives to his mother an annuity for life, & after her decease to his sister, if she be a widow, but not otherwise, but to revert back to his children after her death. At the death of testator & of the mother, who survived him, the sister was a married woman:—Held: the sister, on afterwards becoming a widow, was not entitled to the annuity.

A ct. of equity will not presume that a party who is not in esse is intended to take unless such an intention be made plain & put beyond dispute by the words of the will, & it is only following out the same principle to hold that a person to whom a legacy is given in a particular character & by a particular description shall not be entitled to it unless he be clothed with that character & answer that description at the moment when the legacy might rest in possession (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).—BARTLEMAN v. MURCHISON (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 136; 9 L. J. O. S. Ch. 60; 39 E. R. 346, L. C.

6165. Donee to be of particular character or description—Necessity that donee answer thereto.]—BARTLEMAN v. MURCHISON, No. 6164, ante.

6166. Sufficiency of description—Donee distinguished from every other person—Description acquired after date of will or by testator's own act.]—Testatrix devised certain freehold premises, in which she carried on trade, to trustees in fee, upon trust after the decease of a person to whom she gave the beneficial interest therein for life, to dispose of & divide same unto & amongst her, testatrix's, partners, who should be in co-partnership with her at the time of her decease, or to whom she might have disposed of her business, in such shares & proportions as her trustees should think fit or deem advisable. Testatrix disposed of her business in her lifetime:—Held: the devise in favour of the persons to whom she might have disposed of her business was not void on the ground of uncertainty.—STUBBS v. SARGON (1838), 3 My. & Cr 507; 7 L. J. Ch. 95; 2 Jur. 150; 40 E. R. 1022. L. C.

6167. Uncertain description—First person to fulfil description.]—Devise to several for life; & after the death of the surviving tenant for life, to a son of my nephew A. & his heirs & assigns, & for want of such issue, over:—Held: this was a gift in fee to the first-born son of A.—ASHBURNER v. WILSON (1850), 17 Sim. 204; 19 L. J. Ch. 330; 14 Jur 497; 60 E. R. 1107.

6168. Description ambiguous—Leading term as guide.]—Where a description in a will is ambiguous the mode of extracting testator's intention is to discover the leading term in the description (CHITTY. J.).—BUXTON v. BLAKISTON (1886), 2 T. L. R. 293.

6173. Individuals—Persons "in male line"—Course of descent ascertained at death of testator.]—A bequest of the interest of a sum in Consols to such of the two brothers & six sisters of testator as should be living on the day each dividend became due; &, after the death of the last survivor of the brothers & sisters, to such of their children, the nephews & nieces of testator, as should be living when the dividends became due; & a direction that the residuary estate should accumulate for twenty-one years after testator's death, & then the whole to testator's then nearest of kin in the male line, in preference to the female line, upon condition that the inheritor should assume testator's surname, if not of that name, & bear his arms with due differences; &, in default thereof, to the next in lawful succession, & successively to the heir or successor who should comply with those conditions. Testator died a bachelor—Held: (1) the words the "then nearest of kin in the male line, in preference to the female line," should not be read as meaning the nearest of kin being a male or males, exclusive of females, unless a distinct intention of excluding females were otherwise found in the will; & no such intention in this case appeared, but, on the contrary, the use of words not indicative of sex, & the provision for taking the surname of testator, rather indicated the absence of any such intention; (2) the words "in the male line, in preference to the female line," should not be read as in a parenthesis, so as to give merely a preference to the male line, but must be understood as confining the gift to the male line, & excluding the female line; (3) it was not necessary that the person to take the residuary estate under the bequest should derive his title continuously through a line of males, passing by all females; & the expression "in the male line" was not equivalent to the expression "in a line of males"; (4) the time of ascertaining the course of descent designated by the words of the bequest was at the death of testator; & the bequest did not contemplate a descent from the brothers of testator in preference to a descent from his sisters; but it contemplated a descent from his father, & not a descent from his mother, & the limitation to the nearest of kin in the male line, in preference to the female line, should be construed as a gift to the nearest of kin ex parte paternâ.—BOYS v. BRADLEY (1853), 10 Hare, 389; 17 Jur. 159; 1 W. 6176. —— —— "May be born."]—A will directed that all legacies should be paid within six months after testator's death. By a codicil, executed on the day of testator's death, after giving £500 apiece to five of the grandchildren of his brothers by name, he bequeathed £500 to legatees thus described: "each child that may be born to either of the children of either of my brothers, lawfully begotten":—Held: of the children of the brothers' children neither those born at the date of the codicil nor those begotten after testator's death were entitled, but only children en ventres leur mères at the date of the codicil & of testator's death.—TOWNSEND v. EARLY (1860), 3 De G. C. R. 205.—CAN.

a. Whether gift of residue construed as gift to class.]—Testator, by his will, devised as follows: "All & singular the rest, residue, & remainder of the estate & effects, real & personal, which I shall die possessed of, or to which at the time of my decease I shall be entitled, I do devise, bequeath, & order to be equally divided amongst my five sons above mentioned." One of the sons (A.) died during the lifetime of the father without issue:—Held: the devise of the residue was not a devise to a class.—MCINTOSH v. ONTARIO BANK, 19 Gr. 155.—CAN.

PART XVI. SECT. 17, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

b. Gift to a class including parent & children.]—Testator devised his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to divide the same equally between A. & B his brothers: C. his sister; & A.'s children by his first wife, so that each of his brothers, his sister, & A.'s children their exors., administrators & assigns, equally to be divided between them, share & share alike." Testatrix, by a codicil to her will made after the decease of one of the children, gave the same residuary estate upon the same trusts so bequeathed by her will:—Held: the bequest was made to a class; there was no intestacy, & pltfs. as surviving children were entitled to the share to which the deceased child, if living, would have been entitled.—LEIGH v. LEIGH (1854), 17 Beav. 605; 23 L. 6199. Gift to other children on death of named child.]—Testator gave after the death of A., one of his children, to such of his other children as should be living at the death of A.:—Held: this was a gift to a class; & one of the children having died before testator, the survivors took the whole.—CRUSE v. HOWELL (1858), 4 Drew. 215; 62 E. R. 83; sub nom. CRUSE v. NOWELL, 6 W. R. 271.

6200. Gift to sons equally.] — Testator, a widower, appointed a trust fund over which he had an exclusive power of appointment, in favour of his children, "to be equally divided among my sons, & also any other sum of money that I may die possessed of." He had previously named all his children:—Held: the sons took as a class, & those who survived testator were entitled to the whole fund.—FITZ ROY v. RICHMOND (DUKE) (No. 1) (1859), 27 Beav. 186; 28 L. 6201. Gift to living & subsequently born daughters.]—Testator, having five daughters, gave a legacy to one & the residue to the remaining four, by name, "& their issue," but he afterwards directed that any subsequent born daughters & their issue should be entitled to equal shares with the four daughters. One of the four died without issue in the life of testator:—Held: there was no intestacy, the daughters took as a class, & those who survived took absolutely.—Re STANHOPE'S TRUSTS (1859), 27 Beav. 201; 54 E. 6202. Gift "to all before-mentioned pecuniary legatees."]—Testator by his will bequeathed several sums of money to several pecuniary legatees by name, including one of £500 to his sister, & bequeathed the residue of his personal estate "unto all the before-mentioned pecuniary legatees," with certain exceptions, "to be divided among them in proportion to their respective pecuniary legacies":—Held: the residue was not given to the pecuniary legatees as a class; & testator's sister having died in his lifetime, the surviving pecuniary legatees were not entitled to her share.—Re GIBSON'S TRUSTS (1861), 2 John. & H. 656; 31 L. 6203. Gift to next of kin of testator & wife of testator equally.]—Testator gave his residuary estate to his wife for life, & after her death upon trust for his & her next of kin in equal shares. Testator was illegitimate:—Held: it was a gift to a class, & the only surviving brother of the wife was entitled to the fund.—ROOK v. A.-G. (1862), 31 Beav. 313; 31 L. J. Ch. 791; 9 Jur. N. 6206. Gift to named nephews & nieces—Equally.]—Testator having devised the whole of his real & personal estate to trustees, whom he appointed his exors., concluded his will as follows: "As to, for & concerning the residue of my estate & property, both real & personal, in trust to pay unto my nephews & nieces then living," i.e. at the death of a tenant for life, "viz. R. R. B., W. R. B., A. B., E. H., E. W., E. B., the children of R. R. S., lately deceased, the father's part or share, M. J., & W. R., by equal share & share alike." W. R. B. survived testator & died in the lifetime of the tenant for life:—Held: the above was a gift, not to individuals, but to a class, the members of which were not ascertained until the death of the tenant for life; hence, the share of W. R. B. was not undisposed of, but was divisible with the rest of the fund amongst the nephews & nieces who were living at the death of the tenant for life.—IRELAND v. TREMBATH (1865), 12 L. T. 630; 11 Jur. N. S. 479.

6207. —— Nominatim.] — Where testator directed his trustees to pay all or any part of the residue of the income of his personal estate, so long as his mother should live, as in their discretion, & to the exclusion of any one or more of them, his trustees should think fit & proper, for the maintenance & education, or otherwise for the advancement of "my nephew W., & my nieces, the son & daughters of my late sister A.," & after the decease of his mother, to pay an annuity, which he had given her, "for the benefit of my said nephew & nieces," in the same manner & for the same purposes as thereinbefore directed, until they should respectively attain twenty-one, & provided that, "in case my said nephew, or any or either of my said nieces" should marry under twenty-one, & die leaving issue, his trustees should make advances out of income for the benefit of such issue, "as they may deem expedient or think fit," & directed that, immediately after the decease of his mother, & upon his said nephew & nieces respectively attaining twenty-one, his trustees should transfer one equal share of the trust estate to each, & provided that, in the event of his nephew or either of his nieces dying under twenty-one, married & leaving issue, the issue should take their parents' share:—Held: the gift to the nephew & nieces was made to them nominatim, & not as a class.—Re BARNSHAW'S TRUSTS (1867), 15 W. R. 378.

6208. Gift to children of tenant for life equally.]—Testator devised lands to his niece S. for life, & after her death to her husband J. for his life, & should take an equal share of the residuary estate A. died in testator's lifetime:—Held: this was a gift to a class & not to individuals, & there was no intestacy as to A.'s share, but it was divisible among the other residuary legatees.—TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS & AGENCY CO. v. MCDONALD (1892), 18 V. then "to be equally divided among the children of the above-named J. & S., either by the proceeds from the sale of the properties or otherwise, as may be considered most advantageous at the time." There were eight children of the niece living at the date of the will & at the death of testator, of whom two were respectively named T. & S. T. was an attesting witness to the will. S. was present when testator executed the will, but she did not sign it in his presence so as to make her a good attesting witness within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26):—Held: (1) the devise was to the "children" as a class, as tenants in common; (2) as the attesting witnesses, assuming S. to have been an attesting witness, were by reason of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 15, incapable of taking at the death of testator, they could not be reckoned as members of that class, & their shares, therefore, went to the rest of the class, the other children, & not to the heir-at-law.—FELL v. BIDDOLPH (1875). At the date of the will A. was nearly twenty-one; she died in testator's lifetime. At the death of the tenant for life B.'s children had attained twenty-one:—Held: the bequest to A. did not lapse, since upon the true construction of this particular will testator's intention appeared to be to make one class of nephews & nieces, so that if any of them died in his lifetime the survivors should take.—KINGSBURY v. WALTER, [1901] A. The daughter died unmarried. At the date of the death of testator there were four children of R. living, who all attained the age of twenty-one years:—Held: the gift was a gift to a class, & the fund was divisible in equal sixths between G., M., & the four children of R.—KEKEWICH v. BARKER (1903), 88 L. C. Time of Ascertaining Class

(a) In General.

6214. Time when gift divisible—General rule.]—As long as a fund is in hand the general rule is that new members of the class may be let in. The time when the money is distributable is the time for ascertaining the class after which no more can be let in. Children born after the fund becomes divisible are not entitled to share (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—Re SMITH (1862), 2 John. & H. 594; 70 E. R. 1196.

I take it that it is a well known canon of construction that when there is a gift to a class, as soon as the gift is divisible & there are members of the class entitled to receive their shares, the class cannot be added to (COTTON, L.J.).—Re BEDSON'S TRUSTS (1885), 28 Ch. Testator left no children, & had no posthumous child by his wife, who survived him. A brother of testator survived him only a few days : —Held : the failure of the trust was ascertained at the time of the death of testator, as his widow was not then enceinte, & the gift of the residue had therefore vested.—SIDEBOTTOM v. SIDEBOTTOM (1872), L. Two nephews, who would otherwise have taken under the bequest, died before testatrix, one before & the other after the will :—Held : the gift was to a class, & not to designated persons, & therefore there was no lapse, but the fund was divisible among those of the class who survived the testatrix. —DIMOND v. BOSTOCK (1875), 10 Ch. 6231. ——.]—Testator devised five freehold houses to " all & every the children of my late brother J. who shall be living at my decease or who shall have died in my lifetime leaving issue living at my death in equal shares." By a codicil, after reciting that some of the children of his late brother J. had lately died without issue, testator revoked his previous devise, & devised one of the houses to A., & the remaining four in the same terms as the original devise. Four children of J. were living at testator's death, & one other child died in testator's lifetime leaving children living at testator's death :—Held : the four children who survived testator took the whole property ; where there is a gift by testator to a class, the rule is that those members of the class who are at his death capable of taking, take the whole, the gift being construed as showing an intention on the part of testator that the class shall take so far as the law allows.

Those who become incapable of taking, whether by dying in testator's lifetime or by attesting the will or by some other operation of law do not take (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re COLEMAN & JARROM (1876), 4 Ch. D. 165 ; 46 L. J. Ch. 33 ; sub nom. COLEMAN v. JARROM, 35 L. T. 614 ; 25 W. R. 137.

Children of first cousins dead at the date of the will sought to participate :—Held : on the true construction of the will, sons & daughters of first cousins who were dead at the date of the will were not entitled to take.—Re HILLMAN, ADE v. HILLMAN (1910), 103 L. Afterwards, by an informal codicil, she desired her will to be altered, so that instead of her granddaughter A. receiving one-fourth part of the trust estate, such estate should be equally divided between A. & the children " now born or hereafter to be born " of her daughter B. :—Held : A. took one moiety, & the children of B. born in the lifetime of testatrix, or within nine months after her death, took the other moiety.—ARMITAGE v. ASHTON (1869), 20 L. 6239. Gift to class upon contingent event—Whether members determinable on happening of contingency.]—Testatrix bequeathed her residuary estate upon trust for her sister for life, & after the sister's death, to pay, divide & apply the trust fund in manner following, that is to say, one-tenth to or for the use of R., & another one-tenth to or for the use of C., for their respective lives, & in case either of them should die in the lifetime of the tenant for life or afterwards leaving lawful issue, then testatrix directed that the part of him or her so dying leaving lawful issue should go to & be equally divided among his or her children as they should attain twenty-one :—Held : a child of C., who survived the tenant for life & attained twenty-one, but died in the lifetime of C. took a vested interest.

I concur entirely in the construction which the Master of the Rolls has put upon this will. The first argument in support of a different construction is that the bequest to the children of C. being only given in the contingent event of her leaving issue, therefore only the children who were living when the contingency happened would take. That argument would go to a great extent & affect many decisions, affirming as it must the principle that where there is a gift to a class upon a contingent event, the time of the happening of the contingency determines the individuals composing the class. That is not the rule (TURNER, L.J.).—BOULTON v. BEARD (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 608 ; 43 E. R. 239, L. JJ.

There is no such general rule, but at the same time the circumstance that the gift is only to take effect upon the happening of a particular contingency is a circumstance to be taken into consideration in combination with other indications of testator's intention to be found in other parts of his will (BAGGALLOY, L.J.).—SELBY v. WHITTAKER (1877), 6 Ch. 6242. Gift to children then living or issue of children then dead.]—Testator devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate, subject to certain trusts for the benefit of his wife, to his son absolutely ; but if his son should die under twenty-one without issue, testator gave the same to his wife during her widowhood, with remainder, subject to certain legacies, as she should by will appoint ; & in default of appointment, or in case she should marry again after testator's decease, he directed that, from & after the second marriage or decease of his wife, which should first happen, a moiety of the trust estate, or so much thereof as the appointment should not extend to, should be held in trust for all & every the daughter & daughters who should be then living of his sister M., & the issue then living of such of them as should be then dead, equally amongst them per stirpes.

Testator's son died under twenty-one, without, issue, in testator's lifetime ; & testator's wife also died in his lifetime :—Held : the time of testator's death was the period at which the persons entitled to take under the residuary bequest were to be ascertained ; notwithstanding a daughter of M. was dead at the date of the will, the children of such daughter, having survived testator, were entitled, per stirpes, to a share of the moiety of the residuary estate ; the children of a daughter of M., such daughter being living at the death of testator's wife, but having died in the lifetime of testator, were also entitled, per stirpes, to an equal share of the moiety of such residuary estate ; & the share of the child of a daughter would not lapse by the death of such child in the lifetime of testator, but the entire share of the class would be divisible amongst the children belonging to such class who survived testator.—GASKELL v. HOLMES (1844), 3 Hare, 438 ; 3 L. 6293. Gift to children "who shall attain the age of twenty-one"—Child attaining twenty-one before date of will.]—Testator, by his will dated Mar. 5, 1886, devised certain freehold land with a public-house to the use of his son R. for his life, & after his death to the use of his son's wife E., & after the death of the survivor of them to the trustees of his will, upon trust for sale, & to divide the net proceeds of such sale amongst all the children of R. & E., "who shall live to attain the age of twenty-one years in equal shares."

Testator died in 1887; R. died in 1893; & E. died in 1923. The eldest child of R. & E. attained the age of twenty-one years in 1884. The remaining children attained that age after the date of testator's will. Upon a summons to decide whether the proceeds of sale of the property were divisible amongst all the children of R. & E., & the representatives of those who were dead, or whether the eldest child was excluded:—Held: the child who had attained the age of twenty-one years before the date of the will was not excluded.—Re RAYNER, COUCH v. WARNER (1925), 134 L. The will contained a power to advance to any of testator's sons who should not have attained the age of twenty-one years, any sum not exceeding £1,000, out of the share to which such son might be presumptively entitled; & testator directed his trustees to pay & allow to & for the separate use of any daughter who should marry before the capital of his residuary trust fund should be divisible & divided, an annuity of £200; & if any of his sons who should have attained the age of twenty-four years should be desirous of being married to some person approved of by his trustees, he empowered his trustees to declare in writing that upon such marriage the contingent share of his same son in the capital of his residuary estate should become a vested share, & in that case upon such marriage the same should become vested accordingly, & that for every purpose of his will such son should be deemed to have attained the age of twenty-four years. Four of testator's children having attained the age of twenty-four, filed a bill against the trustees & the other children of testator who had not attained that age, & claimed to have their shares paid to 6309. ——.]—Testator, who died in Mar. 1888, directed that his trustees should out of the income of his residuary estate set apart a yearly sum of £24, "while & so long as there shall be a child of my daughter A., the wife of H., for the time being under the age of twenty-one years, subject as hereinafter mentioned," invest the same & accumulate the income thereof, & should hold the aggregated & accumulated fund in trust for such of the children of his daughter A. as being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should marry, in equal shares, the shares to be vested interests & to be paid & payable in the case of a son at twenty-one, & in the case of a daughter at twenty-one or marriage. Subject as aforesaid, testator directed the trustees to pay the income of his residuary estate to A. for life, & after her death to her husband H. for life; but he directed that if A. should survive H. the trustees should during the rest of her life pay her the whole income of his residuary estate, & should no longer set apart the annual sums, without prejudice to the sums already set apart & invested & the income thereof.

A. & H. survived testator & had five children, three of whom were born in testator's lifetime, & two after his death. The eldest child was born in 1882, & attained twenty-one in 1903, & the youngest was born in 1896, & would not attain twenty-one until 1917:—Held: (1) the period prescribed for aggregation & accumulation, subject to earlier cesser by the death of H. in the lifetime of A., & to later cesser by the birth of other children, was so long as there was a child of A. under twenty-one, whether it was born before or after its eldest brother or sister attained twenty one, namely, until 1917; (2) the class of children to take was not closed when the eldest child attained twenty-one, but only at the end of the period for accumulation, & the accumulated fund was not until then divisible.

The rule that, where there is a gift to a class of children, the class shall be incapable of being increased, so soon as any child would, if the class were not susceptible of increase, be entitled to call for payment, does not apply where there is a direction to accumulate for a period extending beyond the time fixed for distribution.

The rule is never applied unless it is necessary. Where it is unnecessary to resort to it, you give effect to the disposition as it is, & directly you find, as you do find in this case, that there is a direction to accumulate after the date at which the eldest child attains twenty-one—that is to say, where the fund to be divided is a fund to be aggregated & accumulated after that date, so that the divisible fund is not known at that date—you are driven to the conclusion that the child who first attains twenty-one cannot have that which is apparently given to him at that date, because the sum to be divided is not then known. Therefore, where you find a direction, to accumulate to a later date, the rule in Andrews v. Partington, No. 6266, ante, does not apply (BUCKLEY, J.).—Re STEPHENS, KILBY v. BETTS, [1904] 1 Ch. 322; 73 L. 6350. ——.]—(1) Testator devised freehold fee-simple estates in possession to all & every the child & children of his daughter, S., for life ; & after the decease of such child & children, to the lawful issue of such child & children to hold to such issue, his, her, & their heirs, as tenants in common ; & in default of such issue, over to other persons ; S. had nine children, four born in the testator's life, & five after his decease :—Held : all the nine took under this devise as tenants in common in tail with cross remainders.

(2) Testator devised other freehold fee-simple estates to trustees during the life of his son, J., upon certain trusts, remainder to his son's children & their issue, in the same words as in the above devise to his daughter's children, & in default of such issue, to all & every the child & children of his daughter, S., etc., in the same words as before : —Held : only six of the nine children of S. took under this devise ; namely, five who were born, & one who was en ventre at the death of J.

(3) Testator devised other freehold fee-simple estates to his widow for life, & after her decease, to the same uses as in the devise last stated :—Held : all the nine children of S. took under this devise, all being born in the widow's life.

(4) Testator devised other freehold fee-simple estates to trustees during the life & lives of the child & children, etc., of S. in trust, to apply the rents for their maintenance ; & after the decease of such child & children, he devised this estate to the lawful issue of such child & children, etc., in the same words as before :—Held : all the nine children took under this devise equitable interests for their lives, & the life of the survivor of them, & on the decease of the survivor, the estate would go over to the issue of the four children born in testator's life, by purchase as tenants in common in fee.

(5) Testator also bequeathed leaseholds for lives & years, in the same manner as last stated, the legal estate being in the trustees :—Held : all the nine children took in equal shares, they took absolute interests in the leaseholds for years, & estates in the nature of estates tail in the leaseholds for lives ;

Testator died in 1895, & both of his sons survived him, each of them having two children, who were infants at the death of testator. In 1899 one of the sons died, & in 1912 his eldest son attained twenty-one. The other son was alive, being over sixty years old at the date of this summons, & the other three children were still infants, & the question arose whether the class of children to take was closed when the eldest child attained twenty-one :—Held : the class was not closed till the death of the son who was still alive & entitled to the annual income of one half of the fund, so that any child born in the lifetime of such surviving son would be entitled to a share, & therefore the child who had already attained twenty-one was not entitled to call for payment out of his share till the death of such son.—Re FAUX, TAYLOR v. FAUX (1915), 84 L. Testator then directed that, in case any of his daughters should die without leaving lawful issue her surviving, or such issue should die under the age of twenty-one years, the share or shares of her so dying as aforesaid of & in the trust premises should be held by his trustees & the annual income applied between & amongst such of his daughters as might be then living & the issue of such of them as might be then dead, but such issue should only take per stirpes & not per capita : & upon the death of any of his daughters leaving issue her surviving, he directed that the share of such daughter so dying should be paid & divided between the issue of his daughters on their severally attaining their respective ages of twenty-one years if more than one in equal shares & proportions, & if there should be issue but one child, then the whole to such one child. L. died in Dec. 1915, a widow, having had eleven children, six of whom survived her & attained twenty-one. Of the remaining five children who predeceased her, two died in infancy & three attained twenty-one :—Held : on the death of L. her one-fifth share became divisible in equal shares amongst all her children then living & the legal personal representatives of those then dead who survived testator & attained twenty-one.—Re WALKER, DUNKERLY v. HEWERDINE, [1917] 1 Ch. 38; 86 L. 6387. —— ——.]—Testator devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion, & out of the income to arise therefrom, to pay certain annuities to his wife & children respectively. The trustees were then directed to stand possessed of the balance thereof upon the trusts thereinafter declared; & testator directed that, if any of his children should die in his lifetime or afterwards, without having acquired a vested interest in the income or trust moneys, leaving any child or children, then & in such case such last-mentioned child or children should be entitled to the same share of the income as his, her, or their deceased parent would have been entitled to, if living; & from & after the determination of the estates & interests in the trust property thereinbefore limited & given, upon trust to divide same between & amongst the whole of testator's grandchildren in equal shares per capita, as & when they, being respectively a son or sons, should attain the age of twenty-one years, or being a daughter or daughters, should attain that age or marry, for their own use & benefit absolutely. Upon the questions as to what would be the period of distribution of the capital, & amongst whom such capital would be divisible:—Held: no distribution could take place until the death of the last surviving annuitant, & all testator's grandchildren then existing would be entitled to share equally.—Re HISCOE, HISCOE v. WAITE (1883), 48 L. 6388. —— Whether as at death of testator. E. S. devised all her real estate to trustees for a term of five hundred years to raise £200 for the purposes in the will mentioned, & after the determination of that term & subject thereto to other trustees for a term of one thousand years in trust, to pay out of the rents certain annuities & subject to the two terms, she gave the premises to all & every the child & children of her brother T. G. & the heirs of their bodies, etc. T. G. had two children at the death of testatrix, & one born, afterwards, but before the death of the annuitants. This is an immediate devise, & the last mentioned child being born after testatrix's death, is not entitled to any share of the premises.—SINGLETON v. GILBERT (1784), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 68; 29 E. There was a gift over in case there should be no children of B. living at the death of A. The fund was more than sufficient to provide for the annuity:—Held: the gift to the children was not confined to those living at the death of testatrix.—GARDNER v. JAMES (1843), 6 Beav. 170; 49 E. upon their severally attaining the age of twenty-one years, & to the survivors or survivor of them. He left the residue of his estate to his wife. By a codicil he explained that by E., the eldest daughter of his brother, he meant an illegitimate daughter called E. At the date of testator's will & of his death his brother had three children only; namely, E., M. & J. Of these E. survived the widow & had a child, who also survived the widow; M. died in the widow's lifetime, leaving a child who survived the widow; & J. died in the widow's lifetime without leaving issue:—Held: by the expression "E. & the other children" testator intended the three children of his brother living at the date of the will; each of the three children took a life interest only in one-third of the dividends; &, consequently, upon the death of the widow E. took a life interest in one-third of the dividends, & each of the children of E. & M. took one-third of the capital.—LEACH v. LEACH (1843), 2 Y. & C. vi. Particular Words and Phrases.

6394. "Then living"—Reference to death of tenant for life.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to his exors. in trust for the benefit of his wife & children living at his decease, in manner following (that is to say), to pay the dividends to his wife for her life, & after her decease to apply them for the benefit of his children then living; but his meaning was that such of them as should then have attained twenty-one should have their shares, & that the others should have their shares on attaining that age; & he directed, that, in case of the death of all his children under the age of twenty-one without issue, such residue should go to his wife; but that if there should be issue of any of his children living, after the death of the whole of such children, it should be divided amongst such issue:—Held: the children living at the death of the wife were entitled to the residue, to the exclusion of the issue of a child who died in the wife's lifetime.—LA ROCHE v. DAVIES (1837), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 612, n., 1 Jur. 574.; 160 E. R. 846, L. C.

6396. —— ——.]—Testator gave the interest of £400 during the life of J. his daughter, & after her decease, in case she should die without issue, the principal to his other eight children, then living, equally; & if any should be then dead, his or her issue, if any, should be entitled to the shares or share of him or her then dead; but if J. should happen to leave any issue surviving then the £400 to be divided into nine equal shares, one to go to such her issue, & the other eight to be divided in such manner as the whole was directed to be divided in case of her dying without issue. J. died unmarried, the eight other children having survived the testator, but died in her lifetime, leaving issue:—Held: the legacy should be divided into eighths, & go to the grandchildren & remoter issue living at the death of J.—SOUTHAM v. BLAKE (1854), 2 W. R. 446.

Annotation:—Refd. Re Flower, Matheson v. Goodwyn (1890), 62 L. T. 216.

6397. —— ——.]—The word "then" used twice in the same sentence in a will construed, in the first instance, as pointing to the event, & in the second as an adverb of time.

Testator devised an estate to his sons P. & J. equally, during the life of P., & until his youngest child attained twenty-one, & on the death of P., & on the youngest child attaining twenty-one, to sell it & pay one-half of the money to J. & his heirs, & the other half among the then living children of P. "But" (said testator) "in case of J.'s death without lawful issue before the division takes place, then I give his half share to & amongst my then living grandchildren, share & share alike." J. died without issue in 1827, P. died in 1858:—Held: the grandchildren were to be ascertained at the death of P., & the representatives of a grandchild who died in 1856 took no share.—GILL v. BARRETT (1860), 29 Beav. 372; 54 E. R. 671.

6398. — — ——.]—Testator, in an obscure will, gave a life interest to A., with remainder to his children, & in the event of A. dying without leaving a child who should attain twenty-one, directed his estates to be converted, & the moneys arising therefrom to be divided "share & share alike, amongst the children of X., Y., & Z., each & every of the persons so to be benefited, then living, to have an equal share one with the other; & if any of the persons so intended to be benefited shall be then dead, & leave a child or children, grandchild or grandchildren, such child or children, grandchild or grandchildren, is & are entitled to the same share as their father, mother, grandfather, or grandmother, as the case might be, would have been entitled to had each such person thereby intended to be benefited been then living." A. died a bachelor":—Held: (1) the children of X., Y., & Z., who were living at A.'s death, were alone, of the first class of takers, entitled to a share; (2) the children or grandchildren of the first takers, dying in the lifetime of the tenant for life, must themselves be living at A.'s decease to be entitled to a share.—PALMER v. CRUTWELL (1862), 8 Jur. N. S. 479.

6399. —— ——.]—Testator bequeathed a life interest in the residue of his estate to his three children, & directed that after their decease "respectively" the third part of such residue was to go "unto such of their children as shall be then living, & the child or children of such of them as should be then dead, their exors., administrators, & assigns, in equal shares & proportions":—Held: on the death of each child his share went amongst such of the children of all the beneficiaries as were actually living at the date of the death of the child.—BROWN v. THOMPSON, BROWN v. DEWICK, BROWN v. DEWICK (1865), 13 L. principal to be divided amongst my real sons & daughters that are living, except my son that has the interest paid him." The will contained no residuary gift. Testator left S., & eight other children, who all predeceased S. :—Held : the class amongst whom upon the death of S. the £2,000 was to be divided, must be ascertained at the death of S., & the gift over failing, & there being an intestacy, the next of kin of testator living at his death were entitled.—Re DAVIS'S TRUSTS (1872), 27 L. 6402. —— —— Unless contrary intention appears.]—Testator having given property to his wife while unmarried, & after her decease to his children "then living" :—Held : the children living at that time, alone would take, unless it appeared upon the construction of the whole will & to effectuate a clear intention appearing in other parts of it, that the words "then living" ought to be rejected as repugnant, or to be qualified in order to give effect to other words inconsistent with them.—TAWNEY v. WARD (1839), 1 Beav. 563 ; 48 E. 6403. —— —— Attainment of specified age by beneficiaries.]—Testator cannot have intended this sale to take place during the life of his wife. He never meant to take away the income in specie which he had given to her. In saying that the sale is to take place when the youngest child attains twenty-one he means that the sale is to take place when both events have happened, the death of the wife, & the youngest child's attaining twenty-one. In directing the proceeds to be held in trust for a class of persons "then" living, he means living at the time at which, according to the will, the sale was to take place (JAMES, L.J.).—Re DEIGHTON'S SETTLED ESTATES (1876), 2 Ch. 6404. —— —— Prior gifts both direct & through medium of trustees.]—A wealthy Parsi resident of Bombay died on Apr. 3, 1906, leaving his wife S., two sons, J. & K., & several daughters him surviving. By his will dated Apr. 10, 1905, after appointing exors. & trustees, & leaving annuities to members of his family during the life of S., directing that the residuary income should be divided & paid during her life to J. & K., & making provision in the event of either son's death for his widow & issue, he devised to S. for her life "Capadia House" in which he was living, & directed his exors. during the life of S. to let another house of his called "Rutton Villa," the rent of which was to count as part of the residuary income. Testator further (Clause 19) directed that "after the decease of my wife, or in case she shall predecease me, then forthwith after my death" the exors. should stand seised & possessed of "Capadia House & the furniture therein, & Rutton Villa & all my residuary property," & he devised "Capadia House" to the trustees upon trust for his son J. for life, & in the event of his death, upon trust for his widow & issue in such shares as J. may by his will appoint to his widow, "& subject thereto & in default of any such appointment upon trust to J.'s issue, & in default of any such issue, & subject to any appointment for his widow as aforesaid upon trust for his brother K., if then living, & failing him upon trust for the right heirs of me," testator. In Clause 21 there were similar limitations with respect to "Rutton Villa," except that it was devised to K. & the sons' names were in inverse order. J. died in June, 1908, without widow or issue, but S. was still living. In a suit by K. claiming that on J.'s death he became entitled to "Capadia House," & his share of the residuary property subject to the life interest of S. :—Held : the case fell within the rule "that where there is a gift after prior interests to persons then living the word 'then' refers most naturally to the last antecedent," & the words "if then living" in Clause 20 of the will in suit meant living at the death of J.—KAIKUSHRU BEZONJI NANABHOY CAPADIA v. SHIRINBAI BEZONJI CAPADIA (1918), I. 6405. —— Reference to death of remainderman —Gift over if remainderman predeceases tenant for life.]—Testator bequeathed £1,000 to A. for life with remainder to her issue, & in default of issue to S. absolutely. B. & C. both attained twenty-one, but died in the lifetime of A., who died without issue :—Held : the word then had reference to the death of A. without issue ; & the residuary legatee, & not the representatives of B. & C. took.—WIDDICOMBE v. MULLER (1853), 1 Drew. 443 ; 22 L. D., & all the children of J., predeceased testator. Only one of the children of J., predeceased testator. Only one of the children of J. was ever married, & she survived D. & left children :—Held : the word "then" must be read as referring to the death of D., & consequently there was an intestacy, & testator's next-of-kin were entitled.—Re MILNE, GRANT v. HEYSHAM (1887), 56 L. 6413. ——.]—Testator gave property to trustees in trust to pay the income to his wife during her widowhood, & after her "death or remarriage," to hold the property in trust "for all or any my children or child living at the decease of the survivor of myself & my wife & the children then living of any deceased child of mine," who were to take the parent's share. At the date of the widow's remarriage all testator's children were living, but in her lifetime one child died leaving children, & there were children of one of the surviving children of testator:—Held: the children living at the date of the remarriage then took immediate vested interests to the exclusion of all grandchildren.—Re WARNER, WATTS v. SILVEY, [1918] 1 Ch. 368; 87 L. 6414. ——.]—P. on Aug. 11, 1910, by deed settled funds on usual trusts for his daughter B. for life & her issue, with a gift over in default of her issue, which happened, for the children of his three other children on attaining twenty-one or marriage. The settlement empowered B. by deed or will to appoint one-half of the income of the trust funds in favour of any husband of hers who might survive her during his widowhood. On the same day P. made his will & bequeathed the sum of £20,000 to the persons who at his death should be the trustees of the settlement "to be held upon the trusts," etc., in such settlement declared concerning the property thereby settled, & so that such trusts, etc., should "take effect in relation to the sum of £20,000 in the same manner in all respects as if such sum had formed part of the property originally settled by such indenture." P.'s three other children were married, & at his death in 1917 he had several grandchildren. B. died in 1918, & by her will made in 1912, after reciting the settlement appointed one-half of the income of "the trust fund thereby settled" to her husband during his widowhood. The husband claimed one-half of the income of the whole of the trust funds, including the £20,000, & two of the grandchildren, who had attained twenty-one, claimed immediate payment of their respective shares in one-half of the capital of the whole of the trust funds:—Held: the class of grandchildren to take under the gift over did not close when the eldest grandchild attained twenty-one but remained open until the death of the husband, & the two grandchildren who had attained twenty-one were not entitled to immediate payment of any part of the capital of the trust funds.—Re PAUL'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, PAUL v. NELSON, [1920] 1 Ch. 99; 88 L. He gave powers of maintenance out of the income of the share to which any such child might be presumptively entitled ; & powers of advancement to the extent of one-fourth of the portion to which any child should be presumptively entitled. The daughter, by her will, appointed the fund upon trust to raise for each of her two younger children, F. & M., who should attain twenty-one, the sum of £2,000, & subject thereto, as to the whole of the fund, to all her children who should attain twenty-one, in equal shares as tenants in common. She died leaving four children. The eldest of these having attained twenty-one :—Held : the child who had attained twenty-one was entitled to one-fourth of the income which had accrued since the death of her mother on the whole of the £20,000 ; & she would, after payment to her of her share of capital, be entitled during the minorities of F. & M. to one-fourth of the income of the two sums of £2,000 appointed to them in the event of their attaining twenty-one respectively.—GOTCH v. FOSTER (1868), L. 6443. —— ——.]—Testator by his will dated in 1878 devised certain real property to the use of trustees in fee simple upon trust for A. for life, & after her death, for her children who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain that age or marry, as tenants in common. Testator died in 1881; A. died in 1885, leaving six children, all infants & unmarried. The eldest child attained twenty-one in Mar. 1897:—Held: the eldest child was entitled on attaining twenty-one to the entirety of the rents until the next child attained a vested interest, & so on, as if the limitations had been legal.—Re AVERILL, SALSBURY v. BUCKLE, [1898] 1 Ch. 523; 67 L. 6444. —— ——.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his estate on the failure of certain events to the children of his sister when they should attain twenty-one, & failing issue of his sister then over. His sister had no children living:—Held: the income of the residuary funds ought to be accumulated for the benefit of the persons who should ultimately be entitled up to the lawful period of twenty-one years, or till the gift over took effect.—Re TAYLOR, SMART v. TAYLOR, [1901] 2 Ch. 134; 70 L. 6445. —— ——.]—Testator devised freehold premises upon trust after his daughter's decease for her children attaining twenty-one or marrying in equal shares. At the death of testator's daughter one child had attained twenty-one & three were infants:—Held: she was entitled to the whole income of the trust premises subject to the divesting of a proportionate part upon a like contingency.—Re WALMSLEY'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1911] W. 6446. —— ——.]—Testator, who died in 1904, specifically devised real estate to trustees upon trust to permit his daughter to receive the income thereof during her life, & from & after her decease then "as well the income as the corpus" upon trust as she should by will appoint, &, in default of such appointment & so far as the same should not be disposed of by her will, in trust for all her children who being sons should attain the age of twenty-one years or being daughters should attain that age or marry in equal shares; & as to the residue of his real & personal estate gave the same upon trust for his widow during her life & after her death upon certain trusts in favour of his children.

The daughter died intestate in Dec. 1913, leaving six children, the eldest of whom attained twenty-one in Dec. 1914. Her other children

A. died leaving three sons, the eldest of whom alone had attained the age of twenty-one years:—Held: the eldest son was now absolutely entitled to one-third of such income, & the other two-thirds must follow the destination of the share or shares of the corpus of the residuary estate from which the income had arisen or should arise.—Re BIRD, WATSON v. NUNES, [1927] 1 Ch. 210; 96 L. 6449. General rule—Gift void for uncertainty.]—Devise of a trust to all his daughters or their children living at testator's son's death; some of the daughters were living at the son's death, & had children, & others of the daughters were dead, leaving children: decreed all the children as well of the living daughters as of the dead should take.

6451. Court must know who alternative donees are.]—Re SIBLEY'S TRUSTS, No. 6545, post.

6452. ——.]—(1) Testator gave a share of his residuary estate to each of his two daughters for their respective lives, & after their deaths their respective shares "to be equally divided between their respective children or legal representatives": —Held: "representatives" meant the representatives of the tenants for life & not those of the children; the addition to the gift to the children of the words "or legal representatives" did not operate as a divesting clause, but constituted an alternative gift to arise only in the event of there being no child that took a vested interest; & consequently all children of the daughters who survived testator, or were born after his death, took vested interests notwithstanding that they might not have survived their respective mothers.

The objects among whom such real or personal estate becomes ultimately distributable are the children who may be living at the period of distribution & the representatives of such as may have died before that period, having survived testator (JOYCE, J.).

(2) In a case of ambiguity or doubt, that construction is to be favoured which will allow of the child who takes a vested interest making such provision as is usual for his own family (JOYCE, J.).

(3) Where there is a clear gift in a will, it cannot afterwards be cut down except by something which, with reasonable certainty, indicates the intention of testator to cut it down; & if a gift over is fairly capable of being construed in two ways, & one construction will be consistent with the maintenance of the vested interests which have been clearly given in the first instance, the ct. will struggle to adopt that construction (JOYCE, J.).—Re ROBERTS, PERCIVAL v. ROBERTS, [1903] 2 Ch. 200; 72 L. He left one brother, & by deceased brothers a niece & several nephews, one of whom was heir-at-law. Distribution decreed according to the Statute.—LOWNDES v. STONE (1799), 4 Ves. 649; 31 E. At the death of testator there were living a child, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, & great great grandchildren of A.:—Held: they were all entitled to receive £100 apiece.—SOLLY v. SOLLY (1858), 5 Jur. N. S. 36; 32 L. T. O. S. 293.

6456. —— ——.]—Bequest of personalty to the heirs or next of kin of A., deceased:—Held: to be a gift to one class, namely, the next of kin of A., according to the statute.—Re THOMPSON'S TRUSTS (1878), 9 Ch. D. 607; 48 L. J. Ch. 135; 27 W. R. 378.

6457. Mutually exclusive gifts—Second donee takes substitutionally.]—Testator having three sons & three daughters, gave by his will his residuary estate in trust to be divided into six shares ("being as many shares as" he had children), one share to be for the benefit of each child in manner following, viz., the share of sons to be paid to them as soon as convenient after testator's death, & the shares of daughters to be vested in trustees for their respective benefit as thereinafter mentioned. Provided that if any son died without having issue living at his death, the share intended for such son, & any share accruing under that proviso, should accrue to the survivors of testator's children, their exors. or administrators; & he directed his daughters' shares to be invested upon trusts therein mentioned for them & their children. By a codicil, reciting that he desired to settle more distinctly the share of one of the daughters, he revoked the will as to her share, & gave it in trust for her for life, & after her death for such of her children as should attain twenty-one, or, being daughters, marry; & in case she should have no child living at her decease who should attain a vested interest, in trust for testator's children who should be living at her decease, & the representatives of such as should be dead. One of testator's sons died in his lifetime a bachelor, & the above-mentioned daughter died after testator's death a spinster:—Held: the surviving sons' shares, both original & accruing, vested absolutely on testator's death, the clause of substitution, as to sons' shares operating only in case of death in the lifetime of testator; the daughters' accruing shares vested in them absolutely.

We then come to the proviso with respect to the shares of sons dying without issue. This is a proviso which in different wills has different meanings, according to the intentions of the testators. It may be intended to take effect by substitution or by limitation, & if by limitation it may be intended to operate generally, or may be confined to the period of testator's lifetime. But it is not immaterial to observe that the words may operate by substitution, & I think that, upon the true construction of the will, the meaning of testator was to substitute the survivors or survivor for the person who, if he had survived testator, would have taken under the original gift. Of course there could be no substitution for those whose shares had been paid or transferred in his own lifetime (TURNER, L.J.).—WARE v. WATSON (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 248; 3 W. R. 496; 44 E. C. Substitutional Gifts.

(a) Whether Gifts Original or Substitutional.

6459. General rule.]—Gift "to survivors of a class & the issue of such survivor, such issue to take the parents' share only," is a gift to the parents for life with remainder to their children, & not a substitutionary gift.—PARSONS v. COKE (1858), 4 Drew. 296; 62 E. R. 114.

6461. Effect of "and" & "or."]—If the gift be preceded by the word "and," it is an original gift, & all the children of B. will take; if it be preceded by "or," it is substitutionary, & those children only will take who survive their parent.—Re MERRICKS' TRUSTS (1866), L. 6462. ——.]—Testator devised real estate to his wife for life, remainder to his brothers nominatim, as tenants in common in fee; "and" in case of the death of either of them in the lifetime of his, testator's, wife, leaving issue, testator devised the share of him so dying to "all his children," as tenants in common in fee; but in case of the death of either of them in the lifetime of his, testator's, wife, without leaving issue living at his death, or leaving such issue, & same should die under twenty-one, testator gave the share of him so dying to the survivors equally:—Held: the gift to the children, though preceded by the word "and," was a substitutional & not an original gift; hence, those children only of a brother dying in the lifetime of a tenant for life, who survived their father, were entitled to participate in their father's share.—HURRY v. HURRY (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 346; 39 L. J. Ch. 824; 18 W. R. 829.

6463. ——.]—Such words as "& their issue" or "& their respective issue" may be read as meaning either an alternative substitutional gift or an alternative original gift.

Testator died in 1884, having then seven children. By his will he directed the income of his real & personal estate to be divided into seven equal parts, & each one-seventh to be paid to a child. Testator appointed two of his sons exors. & trustees, & directed that on the death of either exor. the survivor should "sell the whole of my real & personal estate & cause same to be equally divided amongst my then surviving children & their respective issue." One son & exor. died in 1907 without leaving issue. Two children of testator died between 1884 & 1907, leaving children who survived deceased exor. Other children survived deceased exor. & had children living:—Held: the estate was divisible into as many shares as there were children of testator who either survived deceased exor. or died before him leaving issue who so survived; each surviving child of testator took one share, his own issue not being allowed to compete with him; & the surviving children of each child of testator who pre-deceased deceased exor. took the share which their deceased parent would have taken had he survived that exor.—Re COULDEN, COULDEN v.

6472. When gift takes effect—Question of intention.]—I fail to see why a gift over in favour of the heirs of an instituted child should be otherwise construed or have any different effect than a gift over in favour of another relative or of a stranger nominatim. In every such case the question as to when the gift over becomes operative depends upon the same considerations. The point to be ascertained is at what period of time testator must be held to have had it in view, or, in other words, must be held to have intended that the right of the institute should come to an end if he was not then alive, & that the right of the conditional institute should emerge. Of course the intention of testator in that respect must be matter of fair & reasonable inference from the whole terms of his will (LORD WATSON).—BOWMAN v. BOWMAN, [1899] A. C. 518, H. L.

6510. —— ——.] — Testator bequeathed a legacy to his first-cousins, to be equally divided between them. He then gave the share or shares of those of his first cousins, if any, who might die in his lifetime, unto all & every the children of all his first cousins who might so die in his lifetime, share & share alike; such shares to be taken per capita & not per stirpes:—Held: the children of the first cousin who had died before the date of the will were not entitled to participate in the legacy.

For convenience of construction, this arbitrary rule has been laid down—that where there is a gift to a class by will, the class is to be ascertained not at the date of the instrument, but at the date of the death of testator. Therefore, it is said, the class was always a contingent class, & you could not say that any person who died in the lifetime of the testator took a share; & it is contended that because you could not have predicted that any one of the persons described would take a share, you must read the gift as if it had been, "I give the share which any first cousin who may be dead in my lifetime would have taken had he lived, unto all & every the children of all my first cousins who may die in my lifetime"—that is to say, as a substantive gift to a new class of persons altogether (JAMES, V.-C.).—Re HOTCHKISS'S TRUSTS (1869), L. (2) In an earlier part of the same will pecuniary legacies of the same amount were given to three persons, each of whom was described as " my niece." The gift is one to nephews & nieces of testatrix who are capable of taking; that is, to nephews & nieces who were living at the date of the will, & those nephews & nieces were only intended to take provided they survived testatrix. for the gift over provides for the event of any of them dying after the date of the will & before the death of testatrix. My intention is, if I can, to construe the will which is before us itself & give the natural meaning to the words & the sentences therein contained. I believe that half the difficulties have arisen by adopting some words that learned judges have used on another occasion with reference to another will as if it was a canon of construction for all wills. . . . The proposition that I propose to adopt is this, that unless the ordinary & usual meaning of the words leads to some absurdity or something which is, to use the language of KINDERSLEY, V.-C., " manifestly contrary to testator's obvious intention," I will simply construe the language of the will itself & give effect to the meaning of those words according to the ordinary & proper meaning of them.

It may be perfectly true to say falsa grammatica non nocet ; at the same time one must not divorce language from its ordinary meaning by introducing a suggestion of false grammar—indeed, I do not think the expression falsa grammatica is applicable to what we have here (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—GORRINGE v. MAHLSTEDT, [1907] A. One of testator's nieces died previously to the date of the will, leaving a child who survived testator & attained twenty-one :—Held : the gift to the children of testator's nieces was not substitutional, but the child of the niece who was dead at the date of the will was entitled to participate in testator's property.—Re CHAPMAN'S WILL (1863), 32 Beav. 382 ; 9 Jur. 6531. —— ——.]—Testatrix made her will, dated Mar. 20, 1867, in the following terms : "If S. should have any money at her death she wishes it to be equally divided amongst her brothers & sisters after all expenses are paid. Should any of her brothers or sisters be dead, their share to be equally divided among their children. If no children be living the money to be divided amongst the surviving brothers & sisters of S." Testatrix, who died in Jan. 1875, had had seven brothers & sisters. One of her brothers was dead at the date of the will, leaving ten children, & the question was, whether such children were entitled to a share of the residue of her estate :—Held : by "their share" testatrix meant the share which a deceased brother or sister would, if living, have taken, & the children of the deceased brother were entitled to a share.

The question is, whether I am to attribute to this testatrix the capricious intention that, if a brother died before her will, his children, should not take, but that, if a brother died after her will, his children should take. I am of opinion that I am not bound to do anything of the sort. She gives her money to be equally divided amongst her brothers & sisters, & then she says, "should any of her brothers & sisters be dead, their share is to be equally divided amongst their children." The words "their share" cannot mean a share given to a brother or sister who is dead, because you cannot give a legacy to a dead person, as testatrix must have known ; & consequently "their share" must mean "the share which they would if living have taken." Therefore I hold that the children of the brother who was dead at the date of the will are entitled to a share (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re SMITH'S TRUSTS (1875), 5 Ch. D. 497, n. ; 46 L. J. Ch. 388, n.

One son & two daughters of testator were dead at the date of the codicil; the two daughters each left one child. On the question of the class entitled to the legacy :—Held : (1) the words " living at my death " governed the whole gift ; (2) on the true construction of the will, there was a direct gift of five-sixths of the legacy to the five children of A. who survived testator equally as tenants in common, & of the remaining one-sixth to the grandchildren of A. who survived testator as joint-tenants.—Re HICKEY, BEDDOES v. HODGSON, [1917] 1 Ch. 601 ; 86 L. There are authorities which show that when you find a gift in a will to A. or B., that word " or " is to have some meaning & it is to have a meaning which depends upon what A. or B. really consists of. You cannot lay down a priori that the gift to A. or B. has any particular meaning ; you must first of all know what A. & B. are.

It does not appear to me that an ordinary man, knowing that he had but two surviving cousins, the two children of his deceased uncles, would describe them as " all & every the children." To my mind that does convey an idea of more than two, & I think it would to the minds of most persons conversant with the ordinary uses of the English language, & it does weigh with me very much, seeing the expression used, & seeing the state of the family, that he did use twice over the words " all & every the children " (JESSEL, M.R.).

(2) In every case to find out what was the class originally intended you must depend upon the will itself (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re SIBLEY'S TRUSTS (1877), 5 Ch. D. 494 ; 46 L. J. Ch. 387 ; 37 L. T. 180.

6552. —— ——.]—A testator gives all his property, real & personal to trustees, directing them to stand seised & possessed of all his estates, real & personal, upon trust to receive the rents, dividends, & annual profits, & pay the same from time to time to his son G. during his life until he should become bkpt. or insolvent, or make a composition with his creditors, & from & after any of such events upon trust to receive the rents, dividends, & profits, & accumulate the same at compound interest, & lay out the same on mtge., such accumulations to continue to be made for twenty-one years after his, testator's, death. There was then power to the trustees to apply such sums as they should think fit towards the maintenance of his son's wife, if he should have one, & the maintenance & education of his children, if any, until the expiration of the twenty-one years, & then to apply the rents, dividends, profits, & accumulations equally amongst his son's children until the younger attained twenty-one, & the issue of such as were then dead, such issue to take only the share the parent would have been entitled to if living; & when the youngest attained twenty-one, testator gave all his real & personal estate & accumulations amongst his son's children in the same words as he had used in the former clause relating to the accumulations for twenty-one years. & in case his son should die without leaving lawful issue living at his death, then over to testator's brothers & sisters equally, & the issue of such as should be then dead, the issue to take only the parents' share. Testator then gave to his trustees powers of leasing during his son's life for seven years, & of sale & exchange at any time. G. the son, died without issue, & never having become bkpt. or insolvent or made any composition with his creditors. A sister of testator died before the date of the will, leaving children; the rest survived him, some dying & leaving children before the death of G., testator's son:—Held: the gift over took effect, & the brothers & sisters of testator were entitled, as well as the issue of those who died before the date of the will, & the representatives of those who survived testator & died in the lifetime of G. the son.—ETCHES v. ETCHES (1856), 3 Drew. 441; 4 W. 6554. —— ——.]—A testator directed his trustees after the failure of limitations for life & in tail, to sell his real estate & pay a third of the proceeds unto & amongst the children of A. deceased, except J., who should be then living, & the issue of such of them as should be then dead leaving issue, & the issue of J., except his son W., share & share alike; the issue of deceased children of A. to have no greater share than their parents would have had if living, & the issue of J. to have no greater share than the issue of any other child of A. He gave another third upon trust to pay the income to P. for life, & after her decease to pay & divide such third share unto & amongst all the children of P. who should be "then living," & the issue of such as should be then dead, such issue to take no greater share than their parents would have had if living. At the end of the will was a proviso that if his estate should ever be sold under the above trust, & the money, or any part of it, become payable to the issue of A. & P., or the issue of J. (except W.), or any of them, & any one or more of such issue should be then dead having left lawful issue, then the issue of such issue as should be so dead should have the share to which their, his, or her parent would have been entitled if living:—Held: a child of P., who survived her, but afterwards died before the period of distribution leaving issue, acquired a vested interest which was not by the final proviso divested in favour of the issue of such child; the word "issue" being held not to apply to children of P. — HEASMAN v. PEARSE (1872), 7 Ch. iv. Postponed Gifts.

6559. Substitutional gift—Death of prior donee before tenant for life.]—A., by his will, gave the interest of his residuary estate to his wife for life, with directions, on her death, to the trustees of his will, to divide the corpus into three equal parts, & to pay the same as follows, viz. one-third part thereof to the child or children of his brother T. who should be living at the decease of his wife; one other third part to F., the daughter of testator's brother A. absolutely; & the remaining one-third part to T. B. & S. B. the son & daughter of testator's brother J. absolutely. Testator then expressed himself as follows: "& in case such any or either of them should die, having left a child or children surviving, then the expectant's share shall go to & be equally divided between his or her child or children in equal shares & proportions, if more than one, & if but one child living, then the whole to that one, & in failure of issue, then to be divided between the survivor or survivors of his said nephews & nieces, as aforesaid, in equal shares & proportions." All the children of T., testator's brother, died in the lifetime of testator's widow, but some of them left issue, who were living at her death:—Held: the one-third part of the residue first given by the will, did not lapse, but the children of the children of testator's brother T. took the same.—GAREY v. WHITTINGHAM (1842), 5 Beav. 268; 11 L. 6560. ——————.]—Testator gave real & personal to his wife for life, & after her decease to her exors., to sell & divide the proceeds in moieties, one of which they were to divide into five shares, & to pay each share to a person named by the will, & in case of the death of any or either of them before his wife, their shares to go to their husbands or wives, if any, & if not, to their respective children, or, if no children, then to the survivors of them, share & share alike. The other moiety testator directed to be divided in the same way among five persons, & in case of the death of any or either, then he gave their respective shares to their children, if any, & if not to the survivors of them: —Held: (1) the second moiety was given to the first legatees as tenants in common; (2) one of the five persons to whom the second moiety was given in the first instance having survived the tenant for life, took one-fifth absolutely; (3) the children of original legatees who survived testator, but died in the lifetime of the tenant for life, & also the children of those who were living at the execution of the will, but died in the lifetime of testator, were entitled; (4) the children of a person believed by testator to be living at the execution of the will, but who was, in fact, dead, came under the same principle as the children last mentioned; (5) where one of the original legatees named in the will died in testator's lifetime, the class of children to take by substitution was to be ascertained at the death of testator; but where the legatee survived testator, & died in the lifetime of the tenant for life, the class was to be ascertained at the death of the legatee; (6) the class entitled to a share under a gift to the survivors was to be ascertained at the death of the legatee whose share went over, or at the death of testator, whichever last happened.—IVE v. KING (1852), 16 Beav. 46; 21 L. The father & two brothers predeceased the aunt:—Held: (1) the "death" of the father meant death in the life of the tenant for life; the brothers & sisters who survived the aunt, & the representatives of those who predeceased her, were entitled to the stock; (2) "representatives" meant exors. or administrators, & not next-of-kin.—Re HENDERSON (1860), 28 Beav. 656; 54 E. 6564. ——— ———.]—A testator directed payment of his debts, & gave all his personal estate & effects, by description, to his wife for her sole use for life. He then gave to her a cottage at B. for her sole use for life, & after her death to fall into the residue of his estate; & he gave two houses in N. street, one in K. place, & one in M. street, to her in the same words. & he directed that the aforesaid properties, & all other his property, real & personal, should be disposed of for the benefit of his children, or any of them, or so many as should survive the death of his wife; nevertheless if any married & died leaving issue, they should inherit & have the benefit of the father's or mother's share, & that the property therein contained should be kept in repair & let for the best rents, & after deducting the interest on mtge. & repairs, be divided among his sons & daughters, provided that his property should not be sold, but let until his youngest son attained twenty one. Then there was a discretionary power to the exors. to sell & pay off interest & just claims, & divide the residue equally among his sons & daughters. The widow claimed to be entitled in fee to the premises in N. street, K. place, & M. street, & to be recouped mtge. money she had paid off; she also claimed dower:—Held: there was a gift to those children who survived the wife, & the issue of those that died in her lifetime, leaving issue.—HILTON v. HILTON (1866), 15 W. 6565. ——— ———.]—A testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees upon trust to pay the interest to his wife during her life, & at her decease he directed the principal & interest to be equally divided amongst his children "or their heirs." R. 9 Eq. 258; 39 L. J. Ch. 422; 22 L. T. 3; 18 W. R. 332.

6566. ——— ———.]—A testator gave a sum of stock to trustees, the interest to be paid to A. for life, & after his death the capital to be divided amongst the children of testator's late daughter B., or their descendants, but should there be none of them surviving, then the capital to be equally divided amongst such other grandchildren as he might then have living, or in default thereof to his legal representative. B. had seven children, three of whom died without children in the lifetime of testator; of the remaining four one alone survived, A., the tenant for life; three died before A., & only one of these three left issue:—Held: the words "should there be none of them surviving" referred to testator's death, & the children of B. who survived testator took vested interests.—Re DAWES' TRUSTS (1876), 4 Ch. 6567. ——— ———.]—A testator, who died in 1871, by his will, dated in 1870, gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to pay the income thereof to his widow for her life, & after her death he gave the property unto & equally between all & every the children of his brothers & sisters, share & share alike, "the issue of any deceased child to take the parent's share." Testator's widow died in 1881. Some of the children of the brothers & sisters of testator survived him, but died in the lifetime of testator's widow, leaving issue. The question was, whether the issue of the deceased children of the brothers & sisters of testator were respectively entitled to the shares of their deceased parents:—Held: the substitutional gift took effect in the case of any child of a brother or sister of testator who had died in the lifetime of testator's widow.—Re GILBERT, DANIEL v. MATTHEWS (1886), 54 L. T. 752; 34 W. R. 577.

6568. ——— ———.]—A testator by his will dated in Feb. 1854, left the entire residue of his property, which was principally realty, to his trustees therein named, "in trust for the benefit of my dear wife during her lifetime, at her death to be equally divided among our children, T. J. & M. to take what would have been their mother's share, & any other of my grandchildren to represent heir parents in similar circumstances." Testator died in Dec. 1856, leaving seven children. His widow died in Apr. 1889. T. J. & M. named in the will were grandchildren of testator, & their mother, testator's daughter, was dead at the date of the will. Three other children of testator died in the interval between the date of his death & the date of the death of his widow. The question was, what in the events which had happened was the true construction of the devise & bequest of the residue of the testator's real and personal estate:—

Held: the words "in similar circumstances" afforded no ground for disturbing the well settled rule that where the period of distribution was the death of the tenant for life, & the gift was one among a class of persons, then the share of any one dying in the lifetime of the tenant for life went over. Therefore, the children of testator who died after his death & before the death of his widow did not take vested or indefeasible interests in testator's estate; but the interests of such children so dying were devised & bequeathed to their children by the concluding clause in the will.—Re MILES, MILES v. MILES (1889), 61 L. T. 359.

The original legatees having died without having had children:—Held: the period of distribution was the date of the death of the survivor of the original legatees, & the gift to the "heirs" being a substitutional one, the property became divisible at that date between such one of the children of E. as was living both at the death of testatrix & at that date & the statutory next of kin of the remaining children of E. who, having been alive at the death of testatrix, had died before the period of distribution.—NEILSON v. MONRO (1879), 41 L. life took shares, & (2) such representatives were the next of kin & not the exors. or administrators of the nephews & nieces.

I attach great importance to the words in this will, "share & share alike," as indicating that each individual of each class was to take beneficially, & as repelling the presumption that the words "legal personal representatives" are used in their strict literal & primary sense for exors. & administrators. In what sense are these words to be understood? I think as designating "next of kin" or "the person or persons taking the personal estate under the Statute of Distributions," who in a popular sense represent the deceased (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—KING v. CLEAVELAND (1859), 4 De G. & J. 477; 28 L. He directed that if his daughter's son then living should die without leaving issue, or leaving issue, all of them should die under age & unmarried, the trustees should pay the share which would have been payable to him under the above trusts to the children of J.; &, that if testator's son died without leaving issue, or all of them died under age & unmarried, the trustees should pay the share which would have been payable to them under the trusts aforesaid to the children of J. & M. The heir-at-law claimed the corpus as undisposed of, on the ground that the disposition of the proceeds of sale was void for remoteness as being a gift to a class not ascertainable till at or after the death of the son's widow, who might be a person unborn at testator's death:—Held: the gift was not a gift to such children of the son & daughter as should be living at the period of distribution & the issue of such of them as should be then dead, but a gift to all the children of the son & daughter, with a gift over by way of substitution of the shares of such of them as might die before the period of distribution leaving issue, when the gift over of any share was void for remoteness the original gift remained unaffected & the heir-at-law had no title.—GOODIER v. JOHNSON (1881), 18 Ch. 6607. ——.]—Under a devise by a man married at the time of making his will, & having a wife then living, but never having had any legitimate children, the will being republished by him after her death, giving part of his freehold estates of inheritance, except (etc.)—(after devising his mansion house to his wife for life, & giving to her an annuity for life in lieu of dower, & giving the said mansion-house, after her decease, to A. for life, provided she so long continued unmarried) . . . to trustees, for the term of thirty-one years; &, after the expiration thereof, "to the children which I may have by the aforesaid A., & living at my decease, or born within six months after"; & all the other his estates, lands, & etc., in certain counties in England & Wales, "to the use & behoof of the child or children which I may have by the said A., as above mentioned," real property may be passed to such natural children so described, born before the date of the will, such a description of natural children as the objects of a devise, where they have acquired a reputation of being the children of testator, as will distinctly & certainly point them out, being a sufficient designatio personarum.

The capacity of illegitimate offspring to take real property under a will, when termed children, depends wholly on the due description of the devisees by other means of designation; & whether it appear, from the general tenor of the will, that such offspring were meant by the testator.

Argument founded on the particular terms of the description of the devisees as children "which I may leave," that the words of the will should be construed as having reference to future legitimate children of testator by the same woman—the will being submitted to be made in contemplation of a possible marriage—rejected, as inconsistent with the general tenor of the devise, which was held to be too plain to be open to such a construction.

6609. ——.]—A. by his will bequeathed a sum of stock in certain events to his grandchildren being children of his sons, W. & J., whether born in wedlock or not; & after certain specific bequests he gave the residue of his personal estate to his sons, W. & J., as tenants in common; but if either of them should die in his, testator's lifetime, the moiety of such deceased son should go to his children; but if both his sons should die in his lifetime, then he gave such residue to & among all their children, as tenants in common. Testator's two sons died in his lifetime, one leaving legitimate & illegitimate children, the other illegitimate children only:—Held: the legitimate children of the son having both descriptions of children, & the illegitimate children of the other son took the residue, & the illegitimate children of the first-mentioned son took no interest.—FRASER v. PIGOTT (1831), You. 354; 159 E. 6610. —— ——.]—Testator had several illegitimate children, of whose births he had regularly kept memoranda & who had always lived with him & their mother, & bore his name. He then married their mother; & she being pregnant, he made his will; & devised his property, "share & share alike, towards the maintenance of my wife, & such children that I may have had by her until my youngest child attain the age of twenty-one": —Held: the illegitimate children did not take under that devise.—DOE d. JACKSON v. HARTSHORNE (1845), 6 L. T. O. S. 145.

6611. —— ——.]—Testator bequeathed a portion of his estate in trust for C. for life, & after his death, "the interest for the maintenance of C.'s wife, & education of his children; at his wife's death, the principal to be equally divided among his children then living." C. at the date of the codicil was unmarried, but had illegitimate children, of which fact it was assumed testator was cognisant:—Held: such children were excluded.—WARNER v. WARNER (1850), 20 L. J. Ch. 273; 16 L. T. O. S. 320; 15 Jur. 141.

6612. —— ——.]—Where there is a gift to children as a class, unless the words necessarily apply to & include illegitimate children, or exclude any but such children, the gift includes legitimate children only. Where, therefore, a gift by will was to divide a capital sum after the death of a legatee for life between all his children & the children of M., the wife of W. & M. had six illegitimate children only:—Held: they were not entitled, & it made no difference that testatrix knew that M. had children whom she believed to be legitimate, & that M. was aged forty-nine at the date of the will.—Re OVERHILL'S TRUST (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 362; 22 L. 6613. —— ——.]—In an English instrument "children" will be construed unless otherwise explained by the context, to mean children lawfully begotten.

B., an Englishman, was married in England to H., an Englishwoman. S., a friend of H., with the concurrence of H., induced B. for a pecuniary consideration, to go to Scotland, & reside there for forty days, in order to give the Scottish Ct. jurisdiction to entertain a suit against him by H. for a divorce. The suit was instituted, & a decree of divorce, on the ground of adultery, was pronounced by the Scottish ct., in 1846. Shortly, afterwards, a marriage was solemnised in Scotland between S. who was domiciled in Scotland, & H.; & three children of such marriage were born in Scotland during the life of B.:—Held: the Scottish divorce was null & void, & consequently the marriage of S. & H. was invalid, & their children were illegitimate; neither S. nor H. were justifiably ignorant of the subsistence of the prior marriage, notwithstanding the divorce, as an impediment to their marriage; & even if either S. or H. had been so ignorant, in which case their children would have been legitimate according to the law of Scotland, notwithstanding the invalidity of the marriage, their children could not take under an English will either real estate devised to the children lawfully begotten of H. or personal estate bequeathed to the children of H.—Re WILSON'S TRUSTS (1865), L. 6614. —— ——. The word "children" used in a will primâ facie means legitimate children, & no other meaning can be given to it by any conjectural application of other words found in the will & supposed to show testator's intention; there must be clear evidence of that intention in the will itself to establish another application of the word. There may be a gift to living illegitimate children as a class, if the words used by testator clearly show that such children were the objects of his bounty. Qu.: whether any such gift to future illegitimate children can take effect?

If there is a gift to "children" as a class, the law, if there is nothing in the will clearly to show a contrary intention, will apply the gift to the legitimate children only.

Testator possessed of leasehold estates spoke in his will of J. as his "son-in-law," & devised these estates to trustees for the use of his "daughter M., the wife of J.," for her life, for her sole & separate use, independent of the debts or control of "her present or any after-taken husband," & in several places in his will mentioned J. & his daughter M. in the same terms. After her death, & if she made no specific appointment, the trustees were to stand possessed of the leaseholds in trust for "the child if only one, or all the children if more than one, of my daughter M." . . . "But if there shall not be any child of my daughter M." then over. There were children in the union of J. & M. born & living before testator's decease, & treated by him as his grandchildren, but that union was not a lawful marriage, J. having been formerly the husband of S., the sister of M., & having, with the knowledges & assent of testator, gone through the ceremony of marriage with M. after S.'s death:—Held: there was here a sufficient designation of the children of M. as the intended objects of testator's bounty, & his gift to them was valid.

The term "children" in a will primâ facie means legitimate children, & if there is nothing more in the will, the circumstances that the person whose children are referred to as his illegitimate children will not entitle those illegitimate children to take. But there are two classes of cases in which that primâ facie interpretation is departed from. One class of case is where it is impossible from the circumstances of the parties that any legitimate children could take under the bequest. The other class of cases is of this kind. Where there is upon the face of the will itself, & upon a just & proper construction & interpretation of the words used in it, an expression of the intention of testator to use the term "children" not merely to its primâ facie meaning of legitimate children, but according to a meaning which will apply to, & which will include, illegitimate children (LORD CAIRNS).—HILL v. CROOK (1873), L. 6616. ——.]—The word "children" in a will means primâ facie "legitimate children," as much so as if the word "legitimate" had been introduced before it. Where, therefore, a person who had two illegitimate children by a certain woman, married her, & the day after his marriage made a will in which, after leaving her his real & personal property for life, he said, "I leave her at liberty to direct the disposal of the property amongst our children by will at her death in such manner as she shall think fit, & should she make no will I desire that the property existing at her death shall be divided, as far as it may be practicable to do so, equally between my children by her" & had not any child born after the date of the will, but lived for some time after making it, & always treated the two illegitimate children as his own children:—Held: the real & personal estate of testator was, subject to the interest given to the widow, for her life, undisposed of by the will.—DORIN v. DORIN (1875), L. For some time prior to the date of the will & the death of testator in 1840, J. & the daughter A. were living together as man & wife at B., where testator resided until within a few months of his death. They were married in 1845. Three children were born before the marriage, one before testator's will & two after his death. E. left one legitimate & two illegitimate children, all living at the date of the will & of testatrix's death. The trustee after the death of E., was about to pay the fund to the three children but on his solr.'s advice paid the fund into ct., as there were "adverse claims." The eldest illegitimate child offered to send the certificates of birth of all the children but the trustee did not accept the offer, & made no inquiries:—Held: as there was no evidence from the words of the will to include the illegitimate children, the legitimate child only was entitled.—Re M'NAUGHTAN'S TRUSTS (1876), 33 L. At the date of the will, A. had had three children by a lady, whom he subsequently married in Holland, she having been first converted to Judaism, pursuant to the ceremonies of the Jewish religion, & thus had made the three children legitimate according to Jewish law. He afterwards had other children:—Held: the term "children" in the will must be construed according to the law of England; &, as there were, at the date of the will, legitimate children to answer the description, the three children born before marriage took no interest.

The law is now thoroughly settled that, where there is a gift to a class, & there are legitimate children to answer the description, & the whole of the description, no illegitimate child can possibly take together with the legitimate children, unless there is something in the will itself to show that illegitimate children were intended to take with the others (MALINS, V.-C.).—LEVY v. SOLOMON (1877), 37 L. B. was aware that there was no certain information of his death. Shortly afterwards G. B. made his will, by which he gave "to my dear wife J. A. B. formerly J. A. C." an interest in certain chattels during her widowhood, & also gave to her the income of his residuary personalty during widowhood, & after her decease or remarriage he gave the corpus to "all & every my child & children," as therein mentioned, & in default of children to his nephews & nieces. G. B. & J. A. C. cohabited for more than a year & a half after the date of the will, when G. B. died leaving J. A. C. enceinte of her only child. She enjoyed the income of the residue till her death, upon which event the nephews & nieces claimed the property under the gift over, & proved that J. A. In 1845 G. had married abroad, & lived with his wife until 1848. In that year he came to England where he remained until his death in 1888. His wife refused to accompany him, & he never saw her again. She died in 1878, aged seventy-four. She never had any children, & at the date of testator's will was fifty-eight years of age, &, therefore, past child bearing. In 1851 G. cohabited with a woman, by whom he had four illegitimate children, born between the years of 1851 & 1858. In 1851, after the birth of G.'s eldest illegitimate child, testator became aware of the condition in which G. was living, but testator recognised & treated all the four children as the children of his son:—Held: although it was possible that testator might have intended to include the illegitimate children mere probability was not sufficient, & if he had the intention, he had failed to express it adequately, therefore, the four illegitimate children did not take any interest under the residuary gift.—Re BROWNE, RAGGETT v. BROWNE (1889), 61 L. At the date of the will M. had eight children. She had for many years prior to the date of the will lived with W. as his wife, & all the children were born before her marriage with him, which took place shortly before the date of the will. Testatrix always believed that her niece & her husband were married before they commenced living together, & that the children were legitimate. In 1893 E. died, & testatrix made a codicil reciting the death & revoking the gift of the third to E. & her issue, but confirming in all other respects her will. W. was by birth a Jewess who had married a Christian. E. was brought up in that faith. She became engaged to M., her maternal uncle but was unable to embrace the Jewish faith by the rules of M.'s synagogue. M. & E. accordingly went to Wisbaden, where they were married both civilly & according to the rites of the Jews; & being subsequently admitted to the Jewish faith in Paris, she was there again married according to those rites. There were five children of the marriage, which had always been recognised by W. On a summons taken out to ascertain whether these children shared in the residuary gift:—Held: there was nothing in the will to show an intention to include them under the term "children" there.

I have failed to find anything which satisfies me that testatrix used the words "issue" or "children" otherwise than in their proper legal meaning (STIRLING, J.).—Re DE WILTON, DE WILTON v. MONTEFIORE, [1900] 2 Ch. 481; 69 L. Testatrix died on Oct. 16, 1911, & her brother ten days later. Both at the date of the will & of the death of testatrix her brother had six living illegitimate children by a woman to whom he was reputed to be married & who was accepted as his wife in the society in which they moved. She died in 1900. The six children were received as legitimate. The testatrix knew all of them & was fond of some, & believed all of them to be legitimate. Testatrix's brother married a lady in 1904, by whom he had two legitimate children:—Held: as the case could not be brought within either of the two classes of cases in which the primâ facie meaning of "children," that is, "legitimate children," is departed from, as laid down in Hill v. Crook, No. 6614, ante, by LORD CAIRNS, the two legitimate children only took under the gift.—Re PEARCE, ALLIANCE ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. FRANCIS, [1914] 1 Ch. 254; 83 L. L. was a great-nephew of testatrix & died on active service in her lifetime leaving one daughter, the infant deft., who was born before the marriage of her parents. Testatrix had knowledge of the existence of this child, but not that the child was illegitimate:—Held: having regard to this want of knowledge the case did not come within the first class of cases stated by LORD CAIRNS in Hill v. Crook, No. 6614, ante, in which the primâ facie interpretation of "child" or "children" was departed from. Therefore the infant deft. was not entitled to have any part of the income of this fourteenth share applied for her maintenance, nor had she any interest in the capital.—Re TAYLOR, HOCKLEY v. O'NEAL, [1925] Ch. 739; 95 L. 6630. Application of rule—To gift over.]—Testator by his will, made in 1847, gave to his eldest daughter, naming her, a freehold estate. Testator in the will twice called her his eldest daughter. He disposed of his furniture & continued, "I particularly direct that, should any of my children die without having children of their own lawfully begotten their share, whether land or money, shall be divided equally among my surviving children, & none of the land shall ever be sold." Testator died on Dec. 14, 1854; his eldest daughter was illegitimate & died intestate without having had any children. An action was brought for partition of the real estate, & the chief clerk found that the persons entitled to the interest of the eldest daughter in the freehold estate devised to her were the surviving children of the testator. On summons issued by the A.-G. claiming the estate on behalf of the Crown:—Held: the rule of law that, where there is a gift to children an illegitimate child cannot take pari passu with legitimate children in the absence of special directions, does not apply to a gift over. On the death of the eldest daughter the estate went to the other children of testator.—SMITH v. JOBSON (1888), 59 L. T. 397.

Testator was not aware when he made his will that his daughter M. was not the wife of J. ; & that four children then borne by her to J. were illegitimate. Testator had always treated his daughter & J. & their children as if the parents had been married & their children lawfully begotten. After the date of testator's will, M. bore three other children to J., which also were illegitimate. 6658. ——.]—Testatrix bequeathed her residuary estate equally for all such of the children being daughters of her nephew R., her niece Mrs. A., & her niece Mrs. H., as should attain twenty-one or marry under that age, each child to be paid her share on attaining that age or marrying under it. At the date of the will & of testatrix's death the nephew R. was cohabiting with a woman reputed to be his wife, & there was issue of this union three daughters, two born before the date of the will, & one born after the date of the will, but before the date of the death. The nieces had several daughters, one of whom had attained twenty-one at the date of testatrix's death. Testatrix had always spoken of R.'s reputed wife as his wife, & the three daughters as their children, there being no suspicion of illegitimacy. Upon the arrival of the time for the final distribution of the estate it was discovered that R. did not marry his reputed wife until some years after the death of testatrix : —Held : the two children born before the date of the will were entitled to participate, but the child born afterwards was not entitled.

There is so strong a probability of it being the intention of testatrix to use in the will the words "Children, being daughters of my nephew R." as including the two children [born before the date of the will] that a contrary intention cannot be supported (JOYCE, J.).—Re DU BOCHET, MANSELL v. ALLEN, [1901] 2 Ch. 441 ; 70 L. He then directed that the remainder of his personal estate, & the residue of the proceeds of certain real estates, should be divided between all his children of his first & second marriages. Testator then charged other parts of his real estates with certain annual payments, & directed that the remainder of the rents & profits should be divided among all his "said children." Testator then directed that, in case one or more of the children by his second wife should die without issue under twenty-one, their shares & legacies should go between his second wife & such of his "children" by her as should be living, & he gave the residue of his estate to all & every of his "children." :—Held : S., who was a child by the second wife before marriage, was within the description of "children" contained in the will, & entitled to share with the legitimate children of testator in the residuary gifts.—EVANS

Charlotte never was the wife of Thomas H., he having previously to 1845 married another woman, who at the date of the will & down to his death in 1875 was his lawful wife. In 1845 Charlotte left her home, & thenceforth cohabited with Thomas H. until he died. At the date of the will she had had four illegitimate children by him, the two survivors of whom were then living, aged respectively twenty & eighteen, & she had not had a child for seventeen years, & was presumably past child bearing. Charlotte died in 1885. These were the only children she ever had, & only one of them survived her. Testator was well aware of the connection of his sister with Thomas H., visited at the house where they resided, & recognised the children of his sister by Thomas H. as his own nephews & nieces :—Held : (1) testator in describing his sister Charlotte as the "wife of Thomas H.," when he knew she was not so, & in using co-relatively with that the expression "children" to describe the offspring of a woman whom he knew not to be lawfully married, had shown that he did not use the term "children" in its strict legal sense, & the illegitimate children of Charlotte were intended, & were entitled to take under the gift in testator's will ; (2) the word "representatives" in the gift must be construed either as "next of kin" or as "descendants," & not as "exors. or administrators. Re HORNER, EAGLETON v. HORNER (1887), 37 Ch. H. during her life, & so that "during any coverture" she should not have power to anticipate the same, &, after her death, in trust for "the children or child of the said A. J. H.," who being a son or sons should attain twenty-one, or being a daughter or daughters, attain that age or marry, & if more than one, equally. J. H. had married a sister of testator, who died in testator's lifetime, & after her death had gone through the ceremony of marriage with testator's daughter A. J., & had had a child by her. K., therein described as wife of J. K., for her separate use independently of J. K. or any future husband she might marry, & after her death in trust for the children of E. K. who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain that age or marry, in equal shares. It was thereby provided that F., the son of E. K., born before her marriage with J. K., should for the purposes of taking an interest under the trusts thereinbefore declared be considered as her legitimate child. In Oct. 1878, E. K. had gone through the ceremony of marriage in England with J. K., who had been her deceased sister's husband. She had issue by him, besides F., who died under twenty-one, two sons, one born on July 23, 1879, & still living, & the other born subsequently, but who died under twenty-one. She died without having been legally married :—Held : no distinction was to be drawn between a deed & a will for the present purposes & the surviving child of E. 6679. ——.]—S., a military officer in the East India co.'s service, died in 1841, domiciled in Delhi, in the North-Western Provinces of India. At the time of his death there was no lex loci in those Provinces, & the law applicable to the succession depended on the personal status, which was regulated by the religion of the individual; & in the event of such rule not being applicable the Courts were, as provided by the Regulations, to determine according to the rules of justice, equity, & good conscience. There was no evidence that S. professed any particular religion. S. had five illegitimate sons acknowledged by him in his lifetime, & several grandchildren, all of whom were, with one exception, illegitimate. By his will, made in English form, after giving life estates to his five sons, he bequeathed as follows:—"I will & declare, that it is my intention & meaning, that in the event of all or any of my afore-mentioned sons (naming them), dying leaving issue or children that the share of the fathers shall devolve on the issue or children, to be by them divided in equal shares." J. an illegitimate son of one of testator's five sons, born some years after testator's death, claimed, under the above devise to "children," to share with his legitimate sister a moiety of his father's one-fifth share:—Held: (1) the technical rule of English law, that under a testamentary gift to children as a class, illegitimate children, although recognised by testator in his lifetime, cannot share with natural lawful children, was not applicable, &, under the circumstances, it was impossible to apply any particular law of construction to S.'s will, or to regulate his succession.—BARLOW v. ORDE (1870), L. 6680. ——.]—Testator bequeathed trust funds & moneys "In trust for all the children, to be equally divided amongst them, their respective exors., administrators & assigns, of my brother H. M. W., of my nephew A. W. D., of my sister H. C. D., & of my niece M. B., of Jamaica, & my nephew G. D., himself, if he shall be then living, but not otherwise, G. D. taking a share with all such children, & the respective shares of such children to be absolutely vested on my decease." H. M. W. was dead at the date of the will. He left three illegitimate children only, who survived testator. There was enough in the case to enable the ct. to presume that testator was aware of the state of H. M. W.'s family:—Held: assuming the children of H. M. W. to be illegitimate they could take under the bequest.—MILNE v. WOOD (1873), 42 L. J. Ch. 545.

6681. ——.]—Testator gave a fund to trustees to pay the dividends to his daughter for life, & after her decease to transfer the principal equally amongst all the children of his daughter, whether by her present putative husband, or by any other person whom she might marry, who should attain twenty-one, their exors., administrators, & assigns. But in case his daughter should die "leaving" no issue, then to testator's other children. Long before the date of the will testator's daughter was, with testator's knowledge, living with a gentleman to whom she was afterwards married, & she had one son by that person, who was born four years before the date of the will, & was known by testator to be illegitimate, & acknowledged by him as his grandson. The daughter being sixty-seven years of age, & having no other child, & her husband being dead:—Held: the illegitimate son was entitled absolutely to the capital, & the word "leaving" being construed "having," & he being now over twenty-one, the money was ordered to be paid to the mother & son, who petitioned for payment to them jointly.—Re BROWN'S TRUST (1873), L. 6682. Inclusion of special provision for illegitimate children.]—Testator gave to "my grandson J., the son of my daughter Alice Jane, & who is now residing with me," the sum of £500, to be paid to him if & when he should attain twenty-one, with power to apply the income in the meantime for his maintenance; but if he died under twenty-one, the £500 & the unapplied income was to go in augmentation of the legacy of £2,000 "hereinafter bequeathed in favour of the children & issue of my daughter Alice Jane." Testator gave to trustees £2,000 to be accumulated till the expiration of twenty-one years, or the death of Alice Jane, whichever might first happen, & then directed the fund & its accumulations to be divided amongst all the children of Alice Jane who should be then living, & the issue of such of them as should be then dead per stirpes. He gave two sums of £2,500 upon trust for the children & issue of his two other daughters respectively, corresponding with the trusts of the £2,000. The grandson was illegitimate. He attained twenty-one, & survived his mother:—Held: the grandson J. was not entitled to participate in the £2,000.

Testator makes a special & distinct provision for J., which appears to me inconsistent with an intention to include him in the general gift to Alice Jane's children (JAMES, L.J.).—MEGSON v. HINDLE (1880), 15 Ch. D. 198; sub nom. Re HINDLE, MEGSON v. HINDLE, 43 L. T. 551; 28 W. R. 866, C. A.

6683. Recognition of testator's illicit connection.]—Testator gave the proceeds of his real & personal estate, upon trust to set apart a sum sufficient to provide for an annuity of £100 to M. E. M. during her life or until her marriage, & to stand possessed of the residue in trust for his four natural children by M. E. M. nominatim, "& all & every other children & child which may be born of M. E. M. previous to & of which she may be pregnant at the time of my death" equally. Three children were born of M. E. M. between the date of the will & the date of testator's death:—Held: the word "children" was used as including illegitimate children, & the after-born children were entitled.

In the present case the testator recognises the connection existing between himself & M. E. M., there is nothing in his will to suggest any intention on his part to put an end to it, & we know in fact that it was not put an end to (STIRLING, J.).—Re HASTIE'S TRUSTS (1887), 35 Ch. 6684. Intention ascertained from will & codicils together.]—Testator, by his will, made in Oct. 1860, after giving certain legacies, including a sum of £400 to his niece H. S., gave "to each of the children of my sister-in-law M. A. L., the sum of £5 for mourning, same to be paid into the hands & upon the receipt of M. A. L., notwithstanding her coverture & their minority." By a codicil dated Aug. 5, 1861, testator directed that after the death of H. S. her legacy of £400 should go "unto & equally between & among all the children who shall then be living of M. A. L., share & share alike, absolutely." Testator died on Aug. 7, 1861, having been attended in his last illness by M. A. L. & her three children. At the date of the will these three children were aged sixteen, thirteen, & eleven. They were all born before the marriage of M. A. L., & she never had any legitimate children. Testator was much attached to these children, & on friendly terms with M. A. L. & her husband, at whose house he died. H. S. having died in 1884:—Held: although if the codicil had stood alone the three children would not have taken the £400, when the codicil was read with the will & the surrounding circumstances the three children were entitled to that sum.—Re HASELDINE, GRANGE v. STURDY (1886), 31 Ch. 6687. Bequest to "first born son"—Testator's knowledge of illegitimacy.]—Testator gave the income of his residuary estate to his adopted daughter, to be paid to her half-yearly, until "her first-born son" should attain the age of twenty-one years; & then he directed one-half of the principal sum to be paid to "her aforesaid son." The only child of the adopted daughter was an illegitimate son, whom testator had known to be such & had maintained:—Held: the language was strictly applicable to a legitimate son, & the illegitimate son could take nothing.—DURRANT v. FRIEND (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 343; 21 L. 6690. Legitimate & illegitimate children.]—Testator, who died in 1917, by his will dated in the same year, after appointing a bank to be his trustee, gave his freehold house, furniture & household effects to his trustee upon trust to permit his "wife," A. M. B., to occupy & use the same during her life, "but only until she shall marry again," & on her death or remarriage he directed that the property should fall into the residuary estate. He gave his residuary real & personal estate to his trustee upon trust to sell, convert & invest, & to pay the income of the investments "to my wife during her life, but only until she shall marry again," & he expressed his wish that his wife should provide out of her income for his "unmarried daughters," & after her death, he directed his trustees to raise £1,000 for each of his daughters, except one whom he named who was then married, who had attained or should attain twenty-one or had married or should marry, & subject thereto to stand possessed of his residuary estate in trust as portions for "all or any of my sons or a son" living at his death who had attained or should attain twenty-one, &, if more than one, in equal shares. Testator was married in 1888 & had one son & two daughters, one of whom was still unmarried. In 1894 his wife died, & in 1896 he went through the ceremony of marriage in France with his deceased wife's sister, A. M. M., commonly called A. M. B., by whom he also had three children, one daughter & two sons. Testator lived with A. M. B. until his death, & she was always recognised by his relatives as his wife, & the children of both unions lived with them as one family:—Held: there was enough on the face of the will to show that the testator did not intend to use the word "children" in its primâ facie sense as meaning legitimate children & to bring the case within the second of the two classes of exceptions to the general rule stated by LORD CAIRNS in Hill v. Crook, No. 6614, ante, & the issue of his union with A. M. B. were therefore entitled to take under the will.—Re BLECKLY, SIDEBOTHAM v. BLECKLY, [1920] 1 Ch. 450; 89 L. J. Ch. 290; 122 L. T. 754; 36 T. L. R. 246; 64 Sol. Jo. 306, C. A.

A. predeceased testator:—Held: legitimate daughters alone could take under this bequest, & the construction was not altered by the circumstance that, in the same will, there was a bequest to B. & her son J., the son J. being illegitimate.—KELLY v. HAMMOND (1858), 26 Beav. 36; 53 E. R. 809.

6693. —— Sufficiency of designation.]—To enable an illegitimate daughter to take under a bequest in favour of daughters as a class it is not sufficient to show that there was, at the date of the will, no possibility of legitimate daughters, & that the claimant was a reputed daughter, but evidence must be given from which testator's knowledge of these facts may be inferred.

Where a testator made a bequest in favour of the daughters of A., his first cousin once removed, & it was proved that A. died seven years before the date of the will, leaving no legitimate daughters, but having had two reputed daughters, of whom one survived at the date of the will; & it being further proved that testator had been in communication with members of A.'s immediate family, who recognised the illegitimate children as daughters of A., & that he had taken a small bequest under the will of A.'s brother, by which will the death of A. & the existence of the reputed daughters appeared:—Held: these facts were sufficient to entitle the surviving daughter as persona designata.—Re HERBERT'S TRUSTS (1860), 1 John. & H. 121; 29 L. 6695. —— "All my daughters"—No legitimate children.]—Testator bequeathed residuary personal estate, after the death of his wife, to "all & every my daughters, in equal shares, who shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or marry." At his death he had no legitimate child. It was found that at the date of the will, which was made some two years before testator's death, he had been married about two years. Prior to the marriage his wife had had three children, daughters, who were now living. All were minors at testator's death, & they had always been acknowledged by testator, & treated by him as his children:—Held: the three daughters were entitled under the above bequest.—LAKER v. HORDERN (1876), 1 Ch. 6696. —— "Daughter of my nephew"—Subsequent reference to "great-niece."]—Testator by his will bequeathed to M. "daughter of my nephew J.," £200; & to T., "son of J.," £100. He directed his trustees to stand possessed of his residue upon trust for "all & every the children & child" of R. & J. respectively. By a codicil testator revoked the bequest of £200 "to my great-niece," M., & the bequest of £100 "to my great-nephew," T., & instead thereof bequeathed to M. £100; to T., £100; & to A., "another daughter of my nephew J.," £100. M. was illegitimate; T. & A. were legitimate:—Held: M. was sufficiently indicated as one of the persons who was to participate in the residue.

I take testator's own words. He describes the legatee as the "daughter" of his nephew. He afterwards by his codicil speaks of her emphatically as his "great-niece," & he speaks of another legatee who was legitimate as "another daughter" of his nephew (BACON, V.-C.).—Re BRYON, DRUMMOND v. LEIGH (1885), 30 Ch. The bill alleged that testator was never married, & consequently that W. & A. were both illegitimate. Deft. was the legitimate daughter of W. Pltfs., who were the representatives of the nephew, claimed as ultimate devisees, on the ground that testator had not left, & could not leave, any grandchildren:—Held: as the legitimate son of W. had been described by the testator as his "grandson," the word "grandchildren" in the will would include the legitimate daughter of the same son, & consequently the ultimate devise to the nephew had failed.—ALLEN v. WEBSTER (1860), 2 Giff. 177; 2 L. G., the testator, directed the trustees of his will to pay certain legacies to named persons, including £100, to "my sister B. R." (formerly B. H.). The will then directed the trustees to stand possessed of the residue of "my trust estate upon trust for all or any of my nieces & nephews living at the death of the survivor of myself & my wife, & the children or child then living of any then deceased nephew or niece of mine who being male attain the age of twenty-one years, or being female attain that age or marry, in equal shares as tenants in common," per stirpes. 6709. Brothers & sisters—Bequest to "sisters"—One legitimate sister & one illegitimate sister.]

Sect. 17.—Description of donees : Sub-sect. 6, A. (e) (f).]

—Testator made a bequest to his "brothers & sisters" with a substitutionary gift over to their issue, & he had in fact four brothers & two sisters only, one of whom was legitimate & the other illegitimate :—Held : the ct. could not give adequate effect to the use of the plural term "sisters" without including the illegitimate sister as a persona designata under the will, & her issue were accordingly entitled to share in the residuary estate.—Re EMBURY, BOWYER v. PAGE (No. 2) (1914), 111 L. T. 275 ; 58 Sol. Jo. 612.

6710. —— Devise to son of testator's brother—Ultimate limitation to his "own right heirs for ever."]—Testatrix demised an estate to the use of G. for life & from & after his death to the use of his sons successively in tail male, with remainder to the use of R., the second son of her "brother" W., for life, with remainder to the use of F., the third son of her "brother" W. for life with remainder of such issue to the use of her "own right heirs for ever." Testatrix died in 1875 a widow & without issue. On the death of G. in 1921, all the prior limitations having failed, the estate was claimed by the daughters of W. under the ultimate limitation. Testatrix & W. were the illegitimate children of J. There was no evidence to show whether they were the children of the same mother :—Held : the claimants did not take under the ultimate limitation in the will, & the estate or the proceeds thereof passed to the Crown as bonâ vacantia.—Re CULLUM, MERCER v. FLOOD, [1924] 1 Ch. 540 ; 93 L. 6712. ·]—E., a married woman living apart from her husband, having a general power of appointment over a sum of stock, by a deed of 1804 appointed the same, subject to her life estate, to C., an illegitimate child, but not described as a child in the deed, with a power of revocation as to one moiety, "in favour of any after-born child or children E. might have born of her body, but not otherwise." In 1813, E. having then another illegitimate child, M., born after the date of the deed of 1804, exercised the power reserved as to one moiety in favour of M., with benefit of survivorship between the two. C. died an infant & unmarried, & on the death of E., M. filed her bill, claiming the whole fund :—Held : the power of appointment reserved by the deed of 1804, could not be exercised in favour of an after-born illegitimate child.

The word "child" in a deed or will, must be construed in its primary legal sense "legitimate child," if, in any possible event, the word thus construed might have a sensible operation ; &, semble, whether the party to take be described as the child of a male or a female. But the context, or extrinsic circumstances rendering it impossible otherwise to satisfy the word, may let in the secondary sense.—DOVER v. ALEXANDER (1843), 2 Hare, 275 ; 12 L. J. 6713. Great-nephews & great-nieces—Bequest to children of nephews & nieces—Whether children of illegitimate nephew included—Nephew described as such.]—Testator had only one illegitimate nephew (John), & only one legitimate nephew (William), & he had no nieces. By his will he gave a legacy to John, whom he described as "his nephew," & he gave his residuary estate "to the children lawfully begotten of his nephews & nieces" :—Held : the children of John participated in the residue.—TUGWELL v. SCOTT (1857), 24 Beav. 141 ; 3 Jur. N. S. 653 ; 53 E. R. 310.

6714. —— —— Earlier reference in will to illegitimate child of nephew.]—Testator gave the proceeds of Blackacre upon trust for the children of his nephew G., "including amongst such children S., the illegitimate son of my nephew," & testator elsewhere in the will recognised S. as his nephew's son. Testator then gave the proceeds of Whateacre upon trust, in the events which happened, for such of eight named nephews & nieces, including G., as should be living at the death of his niece M., & the issue living at the death of his niece of such of his other nephews & nieces as should die in her lifetime leaving issue. G. died in the lifetime of M., leaving issue one illegitimate son, namely, S. Upon the death of M. :—Held : the illegitimate son was entitled to take under the latter gift.—Re SMILTER, BEDFORD v. HUGHES, [1903] 1 Ch. 198 ; 72 L. J. Ch. 102 ; 87 L. T. 644 ; 51 W. 6715. —— Bequest to "daughter of my nephew"—Subsequent reference to "great-niece."]—Re BRYON, DRUMMOND v. LEIGH, No. 6696, ante.

6716. "Issue"—Bequest to issue of nephews & nieces—Illegitimate niece described as "my niece"—Niece's illegitimate daughter described as "her daughter."]—Testatrix gave the income of her residuary estate in moieties between her brother & sister, & on the death of either of them the moiety previously payable to such one equally between her nephews & nieces, naming them, of whom M. was one, during the life of the survivor of her brother & sister, with a proviso that, if any of the nephews & nieces should die during the life of the brother or sister leaving issue him or her surviving, such issue should take the share of income which his, her, or their parent would have taken if living at the time of the decease of the brother or sister. M. was described elsewhere in the will as "my niece M., the wife of F.," & her illegitimate daughter was described as "her daughter G.," & also as testatrix's "great-niece."

On the death of testatrix's brother his moiety became distributable in the manner mentioned in the will, & M. received her share of the income & died in the lifetime of testatrix's sister without having had any legitimate children :—Held : G. was included in the word "issue," & was entitled for the remainder of the life of testatrix's sister to the share of income to which her mother had been entitled.—Re WALKER, WALKER v. LUTYENS, [1897] 2 Ch. 238 ; 66 L. J. Ch. 622 ; 77 L. T. 94 ; 45 W. R. 647 ; 13 T. L. R. 499 ; 41 Sol. Jo. 622.

estate to trustees, upon trust, on the arrival of a future event, to sell the realty, & to divide the residue of the proceeds & of the personalty into four parts, & pay one to his son J., & if his son should die under twenty-one, & should not leave any child who should attain twenty-one, or marry, the share was to be held in trust for such persons as would at his son's decease be his " next of kin " under the Statute of Distributions. Testator directed another share to be held upon certain trusts for the benefit of his daughter A., a married woman, her husband, appointees, & children ; &, if she should leave no child or issue who should become entitled, he directed the share to be paid or assigned to such persons as would at A.'s death be her " next of kin " under the Statute of Distributions in case she had died intestate & unmarried. He directed the third & fourth shares to be held upon similar trusts for the benefit of his two other daughters, H. & E. respectively, then unmarried, their husbands, appointees, children, & next of kin. He then provided that any shares or moneys to which any or either of his three daughters should become entitled " by virtue of the provisions hereinbefore contained, as next of kin of the others or other of them," or of his son, should be held upon the like trusts as the original shares. The daughter H. having married, & died, without having had a child, & without having made any appointment, her husband being also dead :—Held : the phrase " next of kin " of H. could not be read as designating the surviving illegitimate children of testator, & there was an intestacy as to the share of H.—Re STANDLEY'S ESTATE (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 303.

6719. Relations & relatives—General rule.]—Testator gave a legacy to his " relatives " in such shares, etc., as his wife should appoint. She appointed part to children of testator's illegitimate brother :—Held : (1) " relatives " are legitimate relatives, where there was nothing on the face of the will itself to lead to a different conclusion ; (2) the class of relatives, who were to take the share which was badly appointed, was to be ascertained at the death of the donee of the power, & not of testator.—Re SAVILLE'S TRUSTS (1866), 14 W. R. 603.

6720. —— Bequest to testator's " relatives hereinbefore named "—Inclusion by testator of illegitimate relations.]—Testator gave a series of legacies in trust for the respective children of several named persons whom he described as his cousins, though some of them were not legitimately related to him. He gave other legacies in trust for persons whom he described as nieces, though some of them were related by affinity only, & he directed his residuary estate " to be equally divided amongst such of may relatives hereinbefore named as by virtue of the trusts & provisions hereinbefore contained shall become entitled to a vested transmissible interest." By a codicil he revoked the legacies in favour of the persons described as his nieces, & directed that they should not participate in the division of his residuary estate as directed by the will. At the date of the codicil there was only one person legally related to testator, & mentioned by name in the will, who was entitled to take under the residuary bequest :—Held : the children of persons named as cousins, whether legally related or not, were " relatives hereinbefore named " within the meaning of the residuary clause.

It cannot be denied that the word " named," although its primary signification may be " mentioned by name," is also used, & used in no unnatural sense, as synonymous with " specified " or " mentioned " ; & I do not think that there is any hard & fast rule to be laid down that in construing a will you are always to give to any particular word that is used what is called its primary meaning. A word which is used commonly in the English language in several senses must be interpreted according to that which, having regard to the context & the whole of the provisions of the document which you have to construe, appears to be the sense in which testator has used it (LORD HERSCHELL).—SEALE-HAYNE v. JODRELL, [1891] A. 6721. —— Bequest to wife's " relations "—Testator's knowledge of wife's illegitimacy.]—Testator by his will, dated in 1854, gave all his property to his wife for life, & after her death directed the payment of legacies & gave a moiety of the residue of his property to his wife's " relations " as she might direct. Testator's wife was born out of wedlock ; but her parents married after her birth & had other children, & she was always recognised by her parents as their child, & no difference was made by them between her & her natural brothers & sisters. Testator was aware of his wife's origin & at the date of his will she was forty-seven years of age & childless. She survived testator, & by her will, dated in 1891, purported to exercise the power in favour of children & grandchildren of her natural brothers & sisters :—Held : (1) the word " relations " must be construed as meaning those persons who would have been her relations of she had been legitimate ; (2) the power was merely a distributive one, & according to the rule established by the cases before 37 & 38 Vict. c. 37, the class of relations amongst whom the widow could appoint was confined to her next of kin ; (3) that rule of construction had not been altered by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 37.—Re DEAKIN, STARKEY v. EYRES, [1894] 3 Ch. 565 ; 63 L. Two of the legatees in the will called nieces were nieces not of testatrix, but of her late husband:—Held: the circumstance that testatrix had, in her will, called these two her nieces did not enlarge the meaning of the words "nephews & nieces" in the residuary bequest, so as to make it include all the nephews & nieces of her husband living at her death, nor even to include the two legatees whom she had called her nieces in the will.—SMITH v. LIDIARD (1857), 3 K. & J. 252; 69 E. 6737. —— ——.]—Testator devised freehold property to be divided between children of his sister in law & A. & B., & "my niece M." (the last-named three devisees being nieces of his deceased wife). He gave other real property to trustees upon trust for sale, & to pay the income of the proceeds of sale amongst "all my nephews & nieces," for their lives & the life of the survivors of them, & bequeathed the capital to the survivor, & he gave other real property unto "all my nephews & nieces as tenants in common, & he gave his residuary realty upon trust to pay the income to "all my nephews & nieces" for their lives & the life of the survivor, & then devised such residue to the survivor, & bequeathed his residuary personal estate equally amongst "all my nephews & nieces":—Held: the circumstance of testator having given property to his wife's nieces, & having ever called one of them his niece, was not sufficient to include any of his wife's nephews & nieces in the subsequent gifts to all his nephews & nieces; & those only who were related by consanguinity were entitled to take.—MERRILL v. MORTON (1881), 17 Ch. 6738. —— ——.]—Testatar gave to S. & his wife, whom he called his nephew & niece, memorial rings. He also gave to each of certain other "nephews & nieces," naming them, a legacy of nineteen guineas. He gave his residuary estate in trust for all & every his nephews & nieces living at his death, to be equally divided between them, "including my nephews & nieces to whom I have given legacies as aforesaid." S. & some of the others named were nephews & niece of testator's wife. The wife of S. was not the niece of testator or of his wife. The ct., holding on the construction of the will that S. & his wife took as nephew & niece in the gift to the class, held, further, that they took each a share.—Re GUE, SMITH v. GUE (1892), 61 L. Annotation :—Reld. Re Cozens, Miles v. Wilson, [1903] 1 Ch. 138.

6739. ——.]—(1) The question whether a husband's nephew described in a will as "my nephew" & a great-niece described as "my niece" are entitled to share in a gift to "my own nephews & nieces" depends in every case on the particular will & the evidence, no hard & fast rule in the affirmation being laid down by Seale-Hayle v. Jodrell, No. 6720, ante, or in the negative by Smith v. Lidiard, No. 6729, ante, Wells v. Wells, No. 6736, ante, Merrill v. Morton, No. 6737, ante.

(2) Nephews & nieces of the half-blood are prima facie entitled to share in such a gift.

(3) There is no general rule that where a legatee has once been referred to by an inaccurate description in a will, the same description in all other parts of the will must be treated as including that person & all others in the same degree of relationship. The true rule is to determine by the language & context of each will, & any evidence properly admissible, the meaning of the expressions contained in it, & the persons who are entitled to share in the benefits thereby conferred.—Re COZENS, MILES v. WILSON, [1903] 1 Ch. 138; 72 L. J. Ch. 39; 87 L. T. 581; 51 W. R. 220; 47 Sol. Jo. 51.

6740. —— ——.]—Testatrix appointed "my nephews" A., R., & W. to be the exors. & trustees of her will, & gave all her residuary estate to them upon trust for division "between my nephews & nieces living at the date of my decease" & the children then living of her nephews & nieces who had predeceased her.

A. was a son of a brother of testatrix. R. & W. were nephews of her first husband:—Held: only testatrix's own nephews & nieces & the children of such of them as had predeceased testatrix took under the gift of residue.—Re GREEN, BATH v. CANNON, [1914] 1 Ch. 134; 83 L. J. Ch. 248; 110 L. T. 58; 58 Sol. Jo. 185.

6741. —— ——.]—The mere fact that testator has in the earlier part of his will attached to a legatee what is in fact a misdescription does not operate to extend a subsequent gift to a class so as to include the person so misdescribed in the class of which he would otherwise not have been a member. Thus the fact that a wife's niece has been in an earlier part of will called by testator "my niece" will not enlarge a gift to "my nieces" so as to include the nieces of the wife.—Re WINN, BURGESS v. WINN (1916), 86 L. 6748. ——.]—Testatrix gave "to each of the present nieces of A. for her own absolute benefit the sum of £2,000, & in case any of them shall die in my lifetime leaving a child or children who shall survive me, then & in every or any such case the legacy intended for her so dying shall go to her child or children in equal shares, if more than one." At the date of the will & death of testatrix there was only one niece of A. alive, but there were several grand-nieces & great grand-nieces:—Held: the bequest was confined in its terms to the niece of the first degree, & the children of nieces who were dead at the date of the will were not entitled to take by substitution.

It may happen, although a will is unambiguous on the face of it, yet that extrinsic circumstances may show that you are to give the words a meaning different from what they apparently signify; as, for instance, where testator gives all his property to the children of a particular individual, & there are no children but grandchildren, in such a case the term children will be construed to include descendants (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—CROOK v. WHITLEY (1857), 7 De G. v. Half Cousins.

6778. Meaning of "half cousins."]—Testatrix, who had lived in the West Riding of Yorkshire, left property in trust for "my cousins & half cousins." She had first cousins, first cousins once removed, both upwards & downwards, second cousins, & first cousins twice removed. There was evidence that in testatrix's neighbourhood it was the usual custom to speak of first cousins once removed as half cousins, but some slight evidence that even in that district there was some doubt about the use of the word in that precise sense:—Held: the term "half cousin" must have the meaning given to it in the English language as used in ordinary life; no particular local signification should be attached to it; & first cousins, first cousins once removed & second cousins took under the gift.—Re CHESTER, SERVANT v. HILLS, [1914] 2 Ch. 580; 84 L. J. Ch. 78.

6784. —— —— Error in name & sex.]—An error in the name & sex of a legatee will be rectified by a designation in a will. & by the context, when it can apply to no other person ; & parol evidence will be admitted to raise & remove latent ambiguities.

Testator gave a copyhold estate to his nephew William Bell for life & after his decease to trustees as follows upon trust for Elizabeth Abbott, a natural daughter of Elizabeth Abbott, of the parish of G., single woman, & who formerly lived in my service, for life, & after her decease for all & every the child & children of E. Abbott, as tenants in common. In default of such issue, with remainder over. It appeared that there was no such person as Elizabeth Abbott, a natural daughter of Elizabeth Abbott, single woman, but there was John Abbott, a natural son of Elizabeth Abbott, whose reputed father was William Bell, a nephew of testator. Testator's relations insisted that the bequest had failed for ambiguity, & they filed this bill, claiming a division of the proceeds of the estate :—Held : the gift did not fail, & the children of John Abbott, who was dead, were entitled.—RYALL v. HANNAM (1847), 10 Beav. 536 ; 16 L. 6786. —— ——.]—Where a legatee is accurately named in a will there is no rigid rule forbidding any further inquiry as to who is the person to take the benefit, but there is a strong presumption against any person claiming whose name is not that mentioned in the will, which can only be overcome by positive evidence of a cogent nature, clearly proving that testator did not mean the person so named in the will to take the benefit.

A domiciled Scotsman by his will, made in Scots form, left legacies to various Scottish charities, & also a legacy to " The National Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children." There was a society of which that was the correct title, which had its headquarters in London, & confined its operations to England ; there was also a " Scottish National Society for " the same object which worked in Scotland, & that society claimed the legacy :—Held : the English Society was entitled to the legacy.—NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO CHILDREN v. SCOTTISH NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO CHILDREN, [1915] A. 6791. —— ——.]—Testator gave a sum of stock to trustees, for the benefit of " all & every the child & children of his niece Catherine, & of his nephew, the late James Coghlan." Testator never had any nephew named James, who was ever married & had children ; the only nephew who was ever married, & who was dead at the date of the will, having left children surviving him, was named Henry. Evidence was entered into before the master, who found that testator had mistaken James for Henry :—Held : upon exceptions to the master's report, that testator having made his will in ignorance of the real state of his family had made no more mistake than that of giving to the children of a person who had no children. Exceptions allowed.—DAUBENY v. COGHLAN (1842), 12 Sim. 507 ; 11 L. J. Ch. 177 ; 6 Jur. 230 ; 59 E. R. 1227.

6792. —— Adverse claims by two classes.]—A will contained a legacy of £300 to Commodore P. D., of S., & a like legacy to the children of P. H. D. This last legacy was claimed by the three children of H. O. D., & also adversely by the five children of P. D., whose real name was P. J. D. P. J. D. & H. O. D. were both in the same degree of relationship to testatrix, & she had given like legacies to their brothers & sisters. H. O. D. was dead at the date of the will :—Held : the previous gift to Commodore P. D., & the fact that the gift was not to the children of " the said " P. H. D., together with the intention manifested in the will to provide for all the members of the D. family, was sufficient to enable the ct. to decide, upon the face of the will, that the children of H. O. D. were intended, although there was no reference to him as " the late " H O. D.—DOUGLAS v. FELLOWS (1853), Kay, 114 ; 23 L. J. Ch. 167 ; 24 L. T. O. S. 21 ; 2 W. R. 654 ; 69 E. R. 49.

6793. —— Name of living substituted for deceased child.]—Testator gave the residue of his property in trust for his four children, Ann, Charles, Florence Mary, & Agnes Emily. He had living four children, Ann, Charles, Florence, Mary, & Alice Martha. He had previously had a child Agnes Emily, but she had been dead more than five years :—Held : the name of Alice Martha must be substituted for that of Agnes Emily. —GREGORY v. GREGORY (1871), 19 W. These were, in fact, the names of the children of J. D. Savory, while the children of Allen Edward & Florence Savory were named Florence Lilian & Thomas. Upon motion to omit from the probate the Christian names so transposed in the will :—Held : this could not be done, as it was not shown that testator did not mean those names to be inserted in the will, though he might not have meant so to benefit the persons to whom these names actually belonged.—In the Goods of DURLACHER (1896), 75 L. 6811. Error as to marriage—Bequest to woman in maiden name—Donee married to knowledge of testator.]—Testator, by will dated in 1849, bequeathed the interest of a fund to Charlotte Lee, "but in case Charlotte Lee should marry, or die unmarried, the fund was to go over. Charlotte Lee was the maiden name of testator's daughter who had been married in 1828 ; & it was found that testator knew of her marriage, but that it could not be shown under what circumstances he knew it. It also appeared that Charlotte's husband had in 1849 not been heard of for many years. After testator's death the husband appeared, & on the death of Charlotte claimed the fund :—Held : the circumstances were sufficient to show that testator in 1849 believed his daughter's husband to be dead, & he intended that no husband of hers should have the benefit of the fund ; & on her death it passed by the gift over.—CROSTHWAITE v. DEAN (1868), L. 6812. "Late nephew" mentioned by name—Nephew of that name living—Brother of same name dead.]—Testator bequeathed personalty among his nephew John & his niece Hannah, & the children of his late nephew, Mark Ingle, & his niece Eliza. Testator had a brother, Mark Ingle, who was dead at the time of his making his will, & who had left children, a nephew, Mark Ingle, who was alive, & had children at the date of the will, & a nephew, Robert Ingle, who was dead at that date, & had left one child :—Held : the children of the living nephew, Mark, took, & there was a gift to the niece Z., & not to her children.—Re INGLE'S TRUSTS (1871), L. 6813. To person entitled in possession to house named—Under limitations of deed not in existence—Heir-at-law entitled in possession.]—Testator bequeathed a collection of books, manuscripts & pictures to his exors. to hold as heirlooms & suffer same to be used & enjoyed by the person who for the time being under the limitations of a certain deed of entail bearing date the day of shall be entitled to the possession of M. House. At testator's death there was no such deed of entail as described in the will in existence & testator was entitled to the house absolutely in fee simple :—Held : collection belonged to heir-at-law of testator as the person entitled in possession to M. Annuities & pecuniary & specific legacies—Gift of residue to "legatees before named."]—Real & personal estate given to trustees, upon trust to pay the income to testator's wife for her life, & within or at the expiration of ten years from the death of the survivor of himself & his wife to sell & convert the same into money, & out of the income to pay annuities to several persons & classes of persons for the term of ten years, with pecuniary legacies to the same persons & classes, & also to other persons, at the expiration of that time, & annuities to other persons for the lives of the annuitants, & specific legacies to others. The residue was then given to all & every the several legatees before named, with exceptions, rateably & in proportion to the amount of their respective legacies. The wife survived testator :—Held : (1) the "legatees before named" should be construed to be the legatees taking benefits out of the fund which fell in at the wife's death, & the "legacies" such legacies as remained to be satisfied at the expiration of the ten years.

SUB-SECT. 8.—DESIGNATION OF DONEE BY NAME AND DESCRIPTION.

A. In General.

6821. General rule—Name to prevail against description — Extent of application.]—Testator devised a life interest in an estate to his "sister Mary Frances T.D."; he had no sister, but he had a sister-in-law, of that name. After making other devises & bequests, he gave the residue equally among four persons, one of whom was thus named & described, "my niece Mary Frances T.D." He had no niece who bore those two names conjointly; he had nieces who bore one or other of those names:—Held: the bequest as to the fourth part was void for uncertainty.

At the date of testator's will, & at the time of his death, he had two persons in his service named W., one of them was a farming man, & the other was employed both in the house & in the farm:—Held: upon some evidence that testator intended to benefit the latter the latter & not the former was entitled to the legacy.—REYNOLDS v. WHELAN (1847), 16 L. 6886. ——.]—There is no fixed rule of construction which compels a ct. to hold that a child was born in the lifetime of testator because it was at that time en ventre sa mère. That peculiar rule of construction is limited to cases where that construction of the word "born" is necessary for the benefit of the unborn child.

Testator by his will devised real estate in strict settlement to his brother's first & second sons, who were alive at the date of the will, successively for life, with remainder to their first & other sons in tail, with remainder to his brother's third, fourth, & other sons successively in tail, but declared his intention to be that any third or other son born in testator's lifetime should not take a larger interest than for life only, with remainder to his issue in tail male. The brother's third son was born three weeks after testator's death. The first & second sons died without issue:—Held: the third son took an estate tail, not having been born in testator's lifetime.—VILLAR v. GILBEY, [1907] A. C. 139; 76 L. J. Ch. 339; 96 L. He made two codicils, dated respectively Oct. 18, 1904, & Feb. 17, 1905, & died on Apr. 19, 1905. One of his great nieces was not born until Mar. 14, 1905, & she was therefore en ventre sa mère at the date of the will & codicils:—Held: the rule of construction, that a child en ventre sa mère at a particular time, who is subsequently born alive, is to be considered as "born" at that time, where such construction is for the benefit of the child, applied; no contrary intention was indicated in the will; there was no ground for the suggestion that the rule only applied to a class of children to be ascertained at some future date as distinguished from a class of children born at the date of the will, & the infant was entitled to a legacy of £500.—Re SALAMAN, DE PASS v. SONNENTHAL, [1908] 1 Ch. 4; 77 L. 6916 —— ——.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to his trustees, & directed that out of the proceeds they should pay his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts & legacies. By a codicil he bequeathed £4,000 to his trustees, on trust to pay the annual income thereof to his son R., who was in his uncontrolled discretion to apply same for the benefit of testator's son W. & his two children by his late wife. After the death of W., the trustees were to stand possessed of the capital & income of the £4,000 in trust for "the said two children of W. in equal shares as tenants in common, to be paid to them on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years or marrying under that age." At the date of the codicil there were living four children of W. by his late wife. 6937 Synonymous with "issue."]—Devise to M. H. her heirs, etc., for ever; & in case M. H. shall happen to die & leave no child or children, then to I. B. & her heirs for ever, paying the sum of £1,000 to the exor. or exors. of M. H., or to such person as M. H. by her will shall appoint:—Held: the words "child or children" were here synonymous with "issue," & this was not the devise of an estate tail to M. H., but of an estate in fee for M. H. with a good executory devise over to I. B. in case M. H. died leaving no issue living at her death.

The payment of £1,000 in the present case is equally strong in that respect, it being a personal provision, & being to be made to a person or persons appointed by M. H. in her will, the event contemplated by testatrix, seems to have been approximate & not a remote event, namely, a failure of children or issue at M. H.'s death & not an indefinite failure of issue, which might happen at any remote period, & M. H. never having had any child, the event has happened on which these two tenements were given over (per CUR.).—DOE d. SMITH v. WEBBER (1818), 1 B. & Ald. 713; 106 E. R. 262.

6938. ——.]—Testator being seised in fee of freehold lands, & also of copyholds, within the manor & forest of K., which copyholds could not be entailed, after giving a freehold estate at H. "to the child or children which his wife should bear to him, their heirs & assigns," devised as follows: "I give, devise, & bequeath to my son Dr. J. S., his heirs, & assigns for ever, all, etc. (& amongst other property the above copyholds); but if it shall happen my said son Dr. J. S. shall die without leaving any child or children, in that case I give, devise, & bequeath all the before mentioned estates, etc., unto my five children, viz. Mary, etc. (who were illegitimate), their heirs & assigns for ever, to be equally divided amongst them, share & share alike; & if any of my said five children should die before they come of age without issue, such share of him, her, or them so dying shall go equally amongst the survivors. My will also is, & I hereby order & direct that if my present wife E. should leave no issue to inherit the freehold estate at H., that all the said estate at H. shall be subject to the same mode of distribution amongst my aforesaid five children as all the other property above mentioned give & bequeathed to my said son Dr. J. S. in case he die without issue": —Held: if the lands had been freehold, Dr. J. S. would, under the foregoing devise, have taken an estate tail, with remainder over to testator's five natural children, as the words "child or children" were used in the sense of "issue" generally; but the lands being copyhold, & not being capable of being entailed, Dr. J. 6940. ——.]—Where the words "children" & "issue" are used interchangeably in a will, the operation of the word "children" may be extended to "issue generally" to effectuate the intention.

Testator declared, that in case his daughters should "leave issue," they might appoint a fund "unto such children" in "such manner" as they should choose, & in default of any child, they might appoint it to their sisters & their children. "& in case all his daughters should die without issue," then over:—Held: (1) "children" must be construed "issue," & an appointment to a grandchild was within the power; (2) the word "such" did not refer to the issue a daughter might leave, but to such of the class as she might choose.—HARLEY v. MITFORD (1855), 21 Beav. 280; 52 E. 6942. Construed in literal sense—In absence of context affecting meaning.]—It is a rule that in a will the word "children" must be construed in its literal sense, unless upon a proper construction of the will the meaning is clearly either wider or nil; & for this purpose it is not right to take into consideration outside circumstances. Testator left residue to trustees upon trust to divide it into four parts, & pay one part "to the children of his late brother W. equally"; the other part "to the children of his late brother J. equally"; the other part "to the daughters of his late brother A. equally"; & the remaining part to a certain nephew. J. had had three children & no more, all of whom were dead at the date of the will. Testator knew this. J. left, however, both grandchildren & great-grandchildren who survived 6944. When confined to daughters.]—Testator bequeaths the sum of £400 sterling to each of his sister's children that may be alive & unprovided for by marriage at her death; & in a subsequent passage of his will adds, "I have left small legacies to my sister's children, that they may not in their turn become the prey of unprincipled men":—Held: (1) this was a bequest to daughters only, & not to sons; (2) "unprovided for by marriage" meant unmarried; (3) a daughter who was a widow at her mother's death was entitled to her legacy of £400.—DUNBAR v. BOLDERO (1825), 4 L. J. O. S. Ch. 76.

6945. Children of reputed marriage.]—Testatrix gave all her property to trustees, in trust for one for life, & then to pay & divide the fund "to & among all the children of N., born or to be born," who shall live to attain twenty-one or marry. N. could not be proved to have been married. At the time of the will she was living with a man supposed to be her husband, & by common reputation in the neighbourhood they were man & wife. There were three children of N. living at the date of the will, & also at the death of the tenant for life, all well known to testatrix, & all of whom lived to attain twenty-one. N. never had any other child. On the application of these three children after notice to all persons claiming in default of them, & no opposition nor suggestion as to their illegitimacy, the fund was ordered to be paid to them, without any further proof of N.'s marriage beyond common reputation.

Qu.: as to the construction of the words "born or to be born" in such a case, whether they would have included illegitimate children living at the date of the will, no other children of N. having ever been born.—Re NIXON (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 970.

6946. Incapable of strict proof.]—Where there is clear proof that English persons intended to be married to one another, some evidence of a ceremony by way of a French marriage de facto, & of recognition of them afterwards as man & wife by their families & by them of their children as legitimate, during a long course of years, the ct. will not require strict proof of the marriage, even upon the assumption that to contract marriage in France in the manner alleged was not in accordance with the habits of law-abiding people there.

The offspring of such a union held therefore entitled to share in a gift under a will to "children."—Re SHEPHARD, GEORGE v. THYER, [1904] 1 Ch. 456; 73 L. J. Ch. 401; 90 L. T. 249.

K. by codicil directed his trustees to postpone the conveyance to R. till he attained twenty-five. R. at twenty-three married with the approbation of the trustees, though they were not parties to his marriage settlement, which settlement disposed of his interest under his father's will as if it were an estate in fee. When R. attained twenty-five, the trustees, not being satisfied with R.'s conduct, conveyed to him only a life estate in the premises:—Held: the eldest son was included under the term "children."—WELLER v. KER (1866), L. child born before the period of distribution; which in this case was the attainment of the age of twenty-one by the eldest, the marriage of a daughter or the death of a child under twenty-one leaving issue. Upon the general rule a child by a subsequent marriage was included, notwithstanding a strong implication in favour of children by the prior marriage.—BARRINGTON v. TRISTRAM (1801), 6 Ves. 345; 31 E. R. 1085, L. C.

6949. ——.]—The first husband of the daughter was living at the time of making the will, & at the death of testator, & although it was plain that testator had not in his contemplation a second marriage of his daughter, yet, the gift over being in case the daughter should leave no issue behind her, the children of the second marriage took equally with the children of the first marriage.—CRITCHETT v. TAYNTON (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 541; 8 L. J. O. S. Ch. 143; 39 E. R. 208.

6950. ——.]—Under limitations in a will, to a married woman, her husband & children, held, on the context, that the children of her second marriage took nothing.

Bequest to a married daughter for life, & if she survived her husband & children, to transfer it to her, but if she left children, then to her husband, Captain W., for life, with remainder to her children, with a gift over, in the event of her dying in the life of her husband without leaving children. She died leaving children by Captain W., & by a second marriage":—Held: the latter were not entitled to participate in the fund.—STOFFORD v. CHAWORTH (1845), 8 Beav. 331; 5 L. T. O. S. 142; 9 Jur. 363; 50 E. R. 130.

6951. ——.]—Testator bequeathed as follows: "To my daughter A., wife of M. W., I bequeath £10,000. This amount to be settled upon her for her life & to be invested for her in good securities in the names of two or more trustees. At her death £8,000 of the above sum to be divided equally amongst her children, & the remaining £2,000 to be given to her husband if living; if deceased, then the whole amount is to be equally divided amongst her children." The daughter & her husband & child applied for the sanction of the ct. to a settlement of the legacy:—Held: on the construction of the will, the settlement must be so framed as to make the contingent gift of £2,000 to "her husband if living" apply only to M. W. & not to any future husband, & so as to confine the trusts in favour of the daughter's children to her children by him.—Re PARROTT, WALTER v. PARROTT (1886), 33 Ch. D. 271; 55 L. T. 132; 31 W. R. 553, C. A.

Annotation:—Refd. Re Hancock, Malcolm v. Burford-Hancock (1896), 65 L. J. Ch. 276.

6952. ——.]—Testator bequeathed his personal estate upon trusts for his children equally, & directed that in case his daughter, M., or any future-born daughter, should marry during minority with, or after majority without, such consent as therein mentioned, the share of such daughter or daughters so marrying should be assigned to trustees in settlement "upon such respective marriages" for the benefit of such daughter or daughters so marrying for life, "& after her or their decease for the use of her or their intended husband or husbands for his or their life or lives, & after their decease respectively," for the children of "such marriage or respective marriages," with a gift over in the event of a daughter dying "without leaving any issue her surviving." M., the only daughter of testator, was twice married. On her first marriage, she being then an infant, a settlement of her share was made on herself, husband & children, containing no provisions in favour of the husband or children of a future marriage. On her second marriage a settlement of her share was made whereby a life interest was limited to her second husband in the event of his surviving her, which happened. She subsequently died without leaving issue her surviving:—Held: the executory trust contained in the will authorised a settlement of a daughter's share on her for life with remainder to any husband she might leave for his life; & the second husband of M. was accordingly entitled to a life interest in her share.

First of all, then, what children are to take? The will says, "such child or children as shall or may be the issue of such marriage or respective marriages." That is ambiguous, because "respective marriages" may mean the respective marriages of one daughter or of several daughters, if more than one; but then the gift over is not ambiguous, because it is in these terms, "in case my said daughter or daughters shall die without leaving any issue her surviving." That, of course, includes the issue of any marriage; if she marry two or three times, the gift over is not to take effect if there are issue who survive her, & that, I think, shows that the ct., in directing a settlement in execution of the trust, or any conveyancer preparing such a settlement, would take notice that, somehow or other, there ought to be in that settlement (which I consider is to be made on the occasion of the first marriage of the daughter) provisions for the children, at all events, if not for the other issue, which she might have by any marriage (KAY, J.).—NASH v. ALLEN (1889), 42 Ch. D. 54; 61 L. T. 193; 37 W. R. 646; sub nom. Re NASH, NASH v. ALLEN, 58 L. J. Ch. 754.

6953. Former marriage.]—Testator bequeathed a residuary personal fund to trustees, upon trust to apply the dividends for the maintenance of his children, until the youngest should attain twenty-one, & then to divide the same equally between B., D., E. & F., children by his former wife, & G. & H., children by his present wife, & such other child or children as might be living, or as his said wife might be enceinte with at his decease. Testator, at his death, left two other children besides those named in his will, viz. A. & C., who were children by his first marriage:—Held: under all the circumstances of the case, they took no interest in the fund.—STAVERS v. BARNARD (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 539; 2 L. T. O. S. 95; 7 Jur. 1080; 63 E. R. 241.

6954. ——.]—In the construction of wills, the ct. looks not only to the terms of the will itself, but to the surrounding circumstances & the state of the parties.

Upon this principle, where testator gave the income of a fund to his sister, then sixty-eight years of age & married to a second husband, for life, & after her decease, bequeathed the fund to her children "by her then present or any future husband," & she had children by both her first & second husbands:—Held: the children by her former marriage were not excluded.—PASMORE v. HUGGINS (1855), 21 Beav. 103; 25 L. If the testator on the face of his will gives a legacy to the children of a deceased person, mentioning that person as being dead, & at the date of the will there are no children of that person, but there are grandchildren, then the ct., on the principle ut res magis valeat, holds that the gift takes effect in favour of the grandchildren (KAY, J.).—Re SMITH, LORD v. HAYWARD (1887), 35 Ch. Testator, by his will, directed the income of one-fourth part of his personal estate to be paid to the eldest son of his sister M.; & on his decease, to his heir-at-law, etc. The eldest born son of M. was alive at the date of testator's will, but subsequently died in the testator's lifetime, leaving a second born son surviving. Testator, being aware of that circumstance, by a codicil, directed the trustees of his will to divide a certain sum among all the children then living of his sister M., with the exception of the one provided for in his will:—Held: the second born son took the share given by the will to the eldest son.—THOMPSON v. THOMPSON (1844), 1 Coll. 381; 8 Jur. 839; 63 E. 7007. ——.]—I think there is no weight in the argument that the natural & ordinary meaning of the word "eldest" is eldest in point of age, & that it is unjustifiable to substitute such a meaning as a conveyancer or other lawyer whose mind is habituated to establish rules of descent & conventional limitations of real property would be lead to adopt. The will is confessedly not the natural language of testator himself, but the professional language of the conveyancer who was employed to draw it. Surely it is difficult to maintain that in construing such a will the same sense ought to be imputed to its language as if the subject of construction were a document of an ordinary kind, framed in natural language, & treating of untechnical matters (WILLIAMS, J.).

Reading the will, therefore, with no other inclination as to its construction except that which naturally & properly arises from an unwillingness to attribute unreasonable or capricious intentions to testator, when his language permits us to regard him as reasonable & not capricious, I think it clear, that if the words "eldest male lineal descendant" can, without violence, be taken to indicate the person who should at the specified time be heir male of the body of Peter Isaac, we are bound so to construe them (LORD CRANWORTH).—THELLUSSON v. RENDLESHAM (LORD), THELLUSSON v. THELLUSSON, HARE v. ROBARTS (1859), 7 H. The son duly insured his life, & after his death the sum of £5,000 was received by the trustees of testator's will & invested, & the dividends were paid to the son's wife during her life. At her death questions arose on the construction of the codicil, & it was decided by the judge that the bequest was a substitutionary gift to the descendants of those of the daughters of testator who died in the lifetime of the son's wife leaving descendants; that "descendants" included children, grandchildren & great-grandchildren living at the time of distribution; & that, although the daughters were to take as tenants in common, the words "in equal proportions" did not apply as between the descendants themselves, such descendants taking as joint tenants.—Re FLOWER, MATHESON v. GOODWYN (No. 2) (1890), 62 L. F. "Issue."

(a) In General.

7051. Intention of testator to be considered.]—The word "issue," in a will, is not a technical expression, as "heirs of the body," & will yield to the intention of testator, to be gathered from the words of the will, whatever may be its primâ facie meaning; &, therefore, in order to show testator's intention in regard to the word "issue," it requires a less demonstrative context, than in regard to the technical expression "heirs of the body."—LEES v. MOSLEY (1836), 1 Y. & C. 7052. ——.]—In adjudicating on cases involving the meaning of the words "issue" or "children," the whole context of the will must be taken into consideration; & the ct. will, where the context is doubtful, adopt such a construction as will best effect the intention of testator, & tend to the general benefit of the family which is the object of the bequest. 7053. Whether construed the same throughout the will.]—Testator gave £150 to A. & B. at their respective ages of twenty-one, or days of marriage, which should first happen, but in case either of them should die without issue before his or her legacy should become payable, then his or her legacy was to be paid to the survivor & his or her issue. Testator then gave the residue of his estate unto his granddaughters, C. & D., equally to be divided between them, & if but one of them should attain twenty-one, then the residue was to go to the survivor; & he declared that the provision thereby made for C. & D. should not be subject to the control of their husbands, but should be vested in his exors., in trust, for the benefit of C. & D., & their issue respectively, until they should attain twenty-one, being unmarried, or, if married, until a proper & adequate settlement should be made upon them & their issue; but in case they should both die before they attained twenty-one, & without having issue, then he gave the residue over. C. & D. both lived to attain twenty-one:—Held: although the word issue in the bequest to A. & B. could clearly only mean children, yet it did not follow of necessity that in the subsequent bequest to C. & D. it must have the same limited construction put upon it; but it included all the issue of C. & D. living at their respective deaths generally, & such issue took per capita as tenants in common.—HEAD v. RANDALL (1843), 2 Y. & C. 7109. ——.]—Where in a deed, will, or other document a word has a clear & definite meaning when used in one part, but has not when used in another, the presumption is that the word is intended to bear the same meaning in the latter case as in the former.

Twelve distinct legacies contained gifts over to the "issue" of legatees dying in testator's lifetime. Except in the case of the eleventh legacy, the gift over in each contained words clearly restricting "issue" to "children." In the eleventh case the gift over to "issue" contained no words of restriction whatever:—Held: the restriction of "issue" to "children" applied to the gift over in the elventh legacy as well as to the gifts over in the other legacies.

I do not know whether it is law, or a canon of construction, but it is good sense to say that whenever in a deed or will or other document you find that a word used in one part of it has some clear & definite meaning then the presumption is that it is intended to mean the same thing where, when used in another part of the document, its meaning is not clear (LINDLEY, M.R.).—Re BIRKS, KENYON v. BIRKS, [1900] 1 Ch. 417; 69 L. Testator contemplates the case of persons, of whose existence or non-existence he was not sure; giving to them in the first place & if they should not be living at the time of his decease he substitutes other persons in their place; & upon all the authorities it must be admitted, that if in the third clause, the words "respective parents" were not inserted, the words "lawful issue" must be extended beyond children (LORD ELDON, C.).—SIBLEY v. PERRY (1802), 7 Ves. 522; 32 E. The general rule . . . is clear & well established; the word "issue" in a will primâ facie, means the same thing as heirs of the body, & is to be considered as a word of limitation; but such primâ facie construction will give way if there be on the face of the will sufficient to show that the word was intended to have had a less extensive meaning, & to have applied generally to children, or to descendants of a particular class, or at a particular time (PARKE, B.).—SLATER v. DANGERFIELD (1846), 15 M. & W. 263; 16 L. 7166. ——.]—It is very significant in the present case that (quite apart from what seems to me a definition in the devise itself of the sons of William Hobbs & their sons as the persons meant by issue male) there are in the devises following those to William Hobbs & his descendants several distinct preferences to the "estates limited" to his sons & their sons successively. It seems to me that there is ample here to amount to at least an "explanation" within the cases of the phrases "male issue" as meaning sons & sons of sons. But indeed the later part of the devise itself seems to me to amount to more than a mere explanation of the earlier words. I think that the later words contain the principal & crucial description of the intended devisees, & that the words "the lawful male issue in succession" are rather of the nature of a general introductory description (SARGANT, J.).—Re HOBBS, HOBBS v. HOBBS, [1917] 1 Ch. 569; 86 L. In 1763 testator's eldest brother, A., emigrated to Philadelphia, where he resided until his death in 1815. 7188. ——.]—Testator was possessed of two estates in Ireland, Flesk Castle & Dick's Grove. The former he held under a lease for lives renewable for ever ; the latter he held in fee. In 1833 he made a will, in which he said, " I give, devise, & bequeath to my son John Coltsmann all those my property, lands, tenements, & premises at & about Flesk Castle," together with plate, furniture, etc. " I also devise & bequeath to my son J. Coltsmann my lands, tenements, & premises at Dick's Grove." All his estates, etc., were made chargeable with an annuity to his wife. He afterwards made a codicil, in which he said, " If it should happen that my son J. Coltsmann die without heirs of his body lawfully, etc., in that case, & in default of such heirs, I do hereby devise & direct that my lands, etc., at Flesk Castle, & the plate & furniture in my will specified, also my lands, etc., at Dick's Grove," all charged with the annuity to his wife, " & also with a reasonable provision, made with my consent, by my son for his wife, payable for her life, shall at my son's death descend & be transferred to my grandson Daniel Cronin, his heirs, etc., for ever, the heir for the time being to add the name of ' Coltsmann ' to the name of ' Cronin.' " In the event of the contemplated death of the son without heirs, a charge of £6,000 was created in favour of a married daughter. The son never had any child. While in possession he executed disentailing deeds of both estates, & by will devised them to his wife :—Held : reading the will & codicil together, John Coltsmann took the estate of Flesk Castle in fee, with an executory devise over to Daniel Cronin, in the event that happened of John Coltsmann dying without heirs of his body living at his death.

The expression " at my son's death " appears to me to operate on every part of the sentence, & to point to a succession to John Coltsmann, which, if it arises at all, is to open upon John Coltsmann's death, & at no other time (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—COLTSMANN v. COLTSMANN (1868), L. 7189. Death of tenant for life.]—Testator, a bachelor, devised real estate in trust for M. for life & after his decease upon trust to convey same "unto my nearest male heir & should there be two or more in equal degrees of consanguinity to me" he directed his trustee to convey same "unto the eldest of my male kindred for the term of his natural life with remainder to the heirs of the body of my eldest male relative." Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate in trust for M. for life, expressing a desire that he should not mortgage, or anticipate same, but assist the trustee in keeping the real estate in such repair as might be necessary for preserving its value & keeping up the remainder in trust for "my nearest & eldest male relative" who should be such at the death of M. Resp. Mrs. W. was the heiress-at-law of testator both at his death & the death of M. The nearest male relative of testator at the time of his death was the son of a female first cousin & at the time of M.'s death was applt., a son of a daughter of the same cousin:—Held: (1) the expression "nearest male heir" was not used in a technical sense as meaning testator's heir being a male, but meant testator's nearest male relative; (2) the person to take under the devise in remainder was to be ascertained at the death of M., the tenant for life, & on the death of the latter the real estate vested in the applt.—LIGHTFOOT v. MAYBERY, [1914] A. 7192. ——.]—Testator, by a prior part of his will, devised his real & personal estates to trustees, their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, upon trust, to apply a certain sum of the rents & profits yearly in the maintenance of his only son J., who was deaf & dumb; (then testator declared the trusts of his real estate); & after the decease of J., in trust for the first son of the body of J., & the heirs of the body of such first son. The will did not contain any devise to the second, third, & other sons of J., or their issue, but limited estates tail to the daughters of J., as tenants in common; "& after the death & such failure of issue of my said son as before mentioned," then testator limited the estates in strict settlement upon J. & his first & other sons; & for default of such issue, to J. G. & his first & other sons in tail, with a similar remainder to F. G. & his first & other sons; "& for default of such issue, in trust for my own right heirs for ever." Testator then directed his trustees to stand seised & possessed of his leasehold & personal estate, from & after the decease of his said son, "in trust for such person or persons, in the same order & succession, & for such & the same estates, etc., & with such remainders or limitations over, & subject to the same charges, etc., hereby limited or declared concerning my said freehold & copyhold estates hereby devised as aforesaid, so far as the nature of the said leaseholds, & other personal estates & effects, the rules of law & equity, the deaths of parties, & other contingencies, will admit of." All the limitations failed by reason of the deaths of all the parties without issue inheritable:—Held: J., as answering the description of right heir of & testator at his death,

He then gave his trustees a power, with the consent of the person who might be in possession, to lay out his personal estate in the purchase of freeholds, etc., & to settle the same when purchased to such uses as were declared of his "manors, or reputed manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rents, hereditaments, & premises devised by this my will, as shall be then existing undetermined, or capable of taking effect, etc., to etc., for no other estate, use, trust, or purpose whatsoever."

With respect to personal estate whether the gift be an immediate gift or whether it be a gift in remainder the cases appear to me to be uniform to give to the words the sense testator has impressed upon them that if he has given to the heir though the heir would not by law be the person to take that property he is the person who takes as persona designata (LORD ST. 7242. —— ——.]—Testator bequeathed to A. £1,000, part of a policy of £1,200, & the remaining £200, together with all advantages arising from the policy, to his widow. By a codicil he gave the £1,000 to trustees for A. & her children, & in case of A.'s death without children, to his widow "or her heirs." The widow died, having bequeathed the £1,000 to B., & A. died afterwards without children:—Held: B. was not entitled, but the next of kin of the widow, ascertained at her death, & not at the period of distribution, took the £1,000 by substitution.—Re CRAVEN (1857), 23 Beav. 333 ; 53 E. R. 131.

7283. General rule—Wife existing at date of will.]—Testator devised & bequeathed a share of his residuary estate upon trust to pay the income thereof to his son B. for life, & after his decease to B.'s wife for life, & after her decease upon trust as to both income & corpus for B.'s children living at B.'s decease; & the will provided for the cesser of B.'s interest upon alienation or bkpcy., in which event the trustees were to apply the income of the share thereinbefore directed to be invested for B. "& his family" towards the maintenance of B., "his wife & children." B. had a wife living at the date of the will; but she afterwards died, & he married a second wife, who survived him:—Held: there was sufficient context in the will to rebut the presumption that the gift to B.'s wife for life was confined to the wife living at the date of the will, & the widow was entitled.

Where the wife of a person is spoken of by a testator & that person is married at the date of the will, in the absence of any context, the wife existing at the date of the will is the person intended to take (STIRLING, J.).—Re DREW, DREW v. DREW, [1899] 1 Ch. 336; 68 L. At the date of the will the son had a wife living & well known to testatrix. The wife died after testatrix & the son married again:—Held: the word "wife" must bear its primâ facie meaning, as referring to the wife existing at the date of the will, there being no context to control that primâ facie meaning; & consequently, on the death of the son his second wife took no interest under the gift.—Re COLEY, HOLLINSHEAD v. COLEY, [1903] 2 Ch. 102; 72 L. The nephew took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act in the lifetime of his first wife, living at testator's decease, & afterwards married a second wife:—Held: the second wife took no interest in the annuity & upon the death of his first wife, their children became entitled in equal shares to the annuity during his life, & upon his decease the fund upon which it was secured fell into the residue of testator's estate.—BOREHAM v. BIGNALL (1850), 8 Hare, 131; 19 L. of his sons should become bkpt. his life estate should cease as if he were dead, & during the remainder of his life the trustees should apply the income to which, but for such forfeiture, he would have been entitled, for the benefit of the wife & children of such son in such manner as the trustees should think fit. One of testator's sons was married at the time of testator's death; he subsequently became bkpt.; his wife died, leaving him without issue; & he married again & had two children:—Held: the trust for the wife & children of the bkpt. son revived as soon as there came to be any wife or child to take under it.—LONGWORTH v. BELLAMY (1871), 40 L. 7298. —— Gift during widowhood.]—Testatrix by her will, dated Sept. 20, 1898, devised & bequeathed all her real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to sell & as to one equal third part upon trust to invest & pay the income thereof to her son A. during his life & after his death to pay the income of the share to "his wife E. during her widowhood" with remainders over. Testatrix died on Jan. 15, 1901, & on May 6, 1907, E. obtained an absolute decree of divorce against her husband, A. on the ground of his adultery & desertion. A. died on Oct. 8, 1907. Neither A. nor E. married again after the decree for dissolution. On a summons being taken out by the trustees to determine whether E. was entitled to be paid the income of the trust estate, &, if so, for what period:—Held: E. was not entitled to be paid the income as the gift was to commence & finish with widowhood, & as the lady divorced her husband, she never became a widow, & the period of enjoyment specified, had therefore never commenced.—Re KETTLEWELL, JONES v. KETTLEWELL (1907), 98 L. 7301. ——.]—Testator, believing that his brother J. was married to B., gave to each of J.'s children, "except his eldest son, E. J., & his daughter M. L. £100." He gave a fund on trust to apply the income for the benefit of J., "or of his wife, or all or any of his children," during J.'s life, & after his death to pay the income to the "present wife" of J., "if she shall become his widow," for life, with remainder in trust for all the children of J., "except his eldest son E. J., & his daughter M. L." Elsewhere in his will he spoke of his "nephew E. J.," & of the "brother of E. J.," & "all the other children" of J. He gave his residuary personalty to his "niece M. L., daughter of" J. The will was dated in 1889. J. died in 1890. Testator died in 1891. J. had been married many years before, & his wife died in 1875, leaving two daughters, M. L. & another, who both survived testator. J. subsequently cohabited with B., by whom he had seven illegitimate children, including E. J., one of whom was born after the will, & all of whom survived testator:—Held: all the gifts were valid, except that the illegitmate child born after the date of the will could not take.

I do not see how I can avoid holding that when, in a gift "children," then being both legitimate & illegitimate children, there is an exception of one of the illegitimate children, the word "children" is intended to include both classes (NORTH, J.).—Re LOWE, DANILY v. PLATT (1892), 61 L. 7304. Shortly before his decease, he, by his will, devised certain property to "my dear wife Caroline, her heirs, etc., absolutely":—Held: Caroline took under this devise, notwithstanding the entire description was not applicable to her.—DOE d. 7305. ——.]—(1) Illegitimate children cannot take under a gift to a class of children, unless it is clear that the legitimate children never could have taken under the gift.

(2) It is settled, that a bequest cannot be made by a man to his future illegitimate children, for they can have acquired no title by repute; but it is not settled whether a gift can be made to the future illegitimate children of a woman.

A testator having married his deceased wife's sister, & while living with her as his wife, made his will, whereby he gave all his real & personal estate "to my wife," for life, & after her death, upon trust "for all & every my children hereafter to be born." At the date of the will, testator had no children whatever, but two days after, a son was born:—Held: the son could not take under the gift to his children "hereafter to be born."

(3) I entertain no doubt that when testator gave certain property "to my wife," he considered that there was some person who could take under that designation. He could not be referring to any future wife he might marry, for a subsequent marriage would revoke the will. Then it appears from the evidence, that he had gone through the ceremony of marriage with the sister of his deceased wife, whom he could not legally marry, but that he called her his wife, & treated her as such. I consider that there is a good designation of her, & that it is the same as if he had called her Susan Broom; I am of opinion that she takes under the bequest (ROMILLY, M.R.).—PRATT v. MATHEW (1856), 22 Beav. 328; 25 L. 7306. ——.]—A married woman, who had been separated for nineteen years from her husband, married testator by the description of a widow. She had, about that time, heard a report that her husband was living & had made some loose inquiries, but believed he was dead. Testator having made bequests "to his wife," & the ct. being of opinion that the evidence showed no fraud on her part towards the testator:—Held: she was entitled to the legacies.—Re PETTS (1859), 27 Beav. 576; 54 E. After the date of the will the marriage was declared null by the Divorce Ct. in a suit brought by the wife against testator. After this testator died leaving the lady surviving:—Held: although if the lady had been testator's wife at his decease, the words "shall continue my widow & unmarried" might have been in substance the same as "shall continue unmarried" the reference to widowhood could not on that ground be treated as surplusage but was the principal part of the condition & as the lady did not at testator's death fill the position of testator's widow she could not take the annuity.—Re BODDINGTON, BODDINGTON v. CLAIRAT (1884), 25 Ch. In 1903 Mrs. B. went through the ceremony of marriage with testator. All the circumstances were explained to testator & he & Mrs. B. believed that their marriage was perfectly valid, although there might be a slight risk of B. being still alive. They lived together as man & wife until testator's death in 1906. By his will testator gave to his wife his household effects "during her widowhood & after her decease or second marriage" he gave them to his daughters. He also gave her the use of a house & an annuity upon similar terms. After testator's death pltf. lived in the house & received the annuity till the autumn of 1910, when it was discovered that B. was still alive. Mrs. B. brought this action for a declaration that she was the person described in the will as the wife of testator & was entitled as his widow to all the rights & interests given by the will during widowhood:—Held: the words "during her widowhood" did not import a condition, & pltf. was entitled to enjoy the property until she died or married again.—Re HAMMOND, BURNISTON v. WHITE, [1911] 2 Ch. 312; 80 L. Both daughters married. One died in the lifetime of her husband. Then the husband of the other died, having devised his interest in the estate to his wife absolutely:—Held: the surviving daughter could make a good title to a moiety of the estate; for that a gift to an unmarried woman for life, with remainder in fee to her husband, gives an indefeasibly vested remainder in fee to her first husband.—RADFORD v. WILLIS (1871), 7 Ch. 7328. —— Express reference to statute.]—A., after specific bequests to different members of his family, gave the residue to three persons, in trust to pay the dividends to his son for life, & after the son's decease to pay to any widow of the son, who was not then married, an annuity of £600 for life, & the residue to his son's children, &, in case there should not be any child of the son "then to stand possessed of the same, in trust for such person or persons of the blood of me, as would by virtue of the Statutes of Distributions of intestates' effects have become, & been" then "entitled thereto, in case I had died intestate." At A.'s death, he left the son & four daughters him surviving. The son married, enjoyed the dividends of the residue during life, & died without ever having had a child:—Held: (1) the word "then" even if treated as an adverb of time, referred only to the time when the persons entitled would come into possession of what had been bequeathed to them; (2) the persons entitled were to be ascertained at the death of testator; (3) the son was one of those persons, & his right as one of the next of kin was not affected by the previous gift of a life interest in the whole of the residue, so that, on the death of the son without issue, the residue became divisible into five shares, of which his personal representatives took one, & his sisters the other four.—BULLOCK v. DOWNES (1860), 9 H. L. Cas. 1; 3 L. T. 194; 11 E. R. 627, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. DOWNES v. BULLOCK (1858), 25 Beav. 54.

7329. ——.]—Where a testator expressly bequeaths property to his next of kin according to the Statutes of Distribution, he does not mean, as a general rule, those only to take who have been held to fill that character; but what he does mean is, that the law is to distribute his property as it would do in the case of an intestacy.

Where a testator said in his will, "the residue of my personal estate & effects, not hereinbefore disposed of, I propose to bequeath by a codicil to this my will, or otherwise to allow the same to go to my next of kin, according to the statutes for the distribution of the estates of intestates"; & testator died without having made any codicil to his will, leaving no children, but a widow & several next of kin:—Held: there was no express gift of the residuary personalty to the next of kin; but the property must go & be distributed as undisposed of by testator.—ASH v. ASH (1863), 33 Beav. 187; 9 L. When the events happened, there were living the above-named daughter & grandchild, & a sister of testator, & two nephews, sons of his deceased brother:—Held: the effect of the will was to exclude the daughter & grandchild, & the sister & nephews took in equal shares per capita.—Re TAYLOR, TAYLOR v. LEY (1885), 52 L. 7338. J. & T. were not related to each other, & at the date of the will, they had no children, or descendants of children, except testatrix herself; so that, at her death, there was no person who was of kin both to her father & to her mother:—Held: no person could take, under the ultimate devise over, unless he was next of kin both to the father & to the mother, &, there being no such person, the property devolved to testatrix's heir.—PYCROFT v. GREGORY (1829), 4 Russ. 526; 6 L. Propositus ascertained by context.]—Testator made certain bequests on the death of his wife, & directed, that if the person entitled to claim any property by virtue of his will, should die before he could prosecute his claim thereto, the property so falling to the deceased person should be divided "amongst the nearest relations & next-of-kin":—Held: testator thereby intended not his own, but the next of kin of such legatee.—ROBSON v. IBBS (1837), Donnelly, 226; 6 L. J. Ch. 213; 47 E. R. 337, L. C.

7341. "Nearest of kin in male line."]—Testator directed that a certain portion of his property should be invested, & the dividends, etc., paid among his brothers & sisters & their children; that the residue should accumulate for twenty-one years after his death, at the end of which time the accumulated fund, to which testator gave the name of his "capital property," was to become the property of "the then nearest of kin to myself in the male line in preference to the female line." The "inheritor" of this capital property was to assume testator's surname "if not of that surname," & was to "bear & use the arms, with the differences, which may have been at any time previous to my death assigned to me." Testator in a memorandum, dated some time afterwards, & which was admitted to proof as a codicil, directed that his gold medal given for the capture of Java, should descend with "the patent of my armorial bearings to the inheritor of my capital property." The Crown, in consideration of the distinguished services of testator, had, between the date of the will & of the codicil, made a grant of arms to testator "& his descendants," & failing them, then, with the omission of emblazoning the Java medal, "to be borne by the descendants of his late father, with due & proper differences." At the date of the will & at the death of testator he had two brothers & several sisters living. The two brothers, unmarried, the unmarried sisters, & two of the married sisters died within the twenty-one years, leaving one married sister & the sons & daughters of her married sisters & of herself surviving. B., the son of a paternal uncle of testator, claimed the "capital property" of testator, as being the only person who answered the description of "the nearest of kin in the male line":—Held: he was not entitled, the words of the will not restricting the gift to a male claiming through males.—SAYER v. BRADLY (1856), 5 H. On a summons raising the question whether the heir-at-law of the statutory next of kin of the last surviving child or the heir-at-law of testatrix became entitled to the real estate of testatrix:—Held: upon the true construction of the will the real estate could not be treated as a converted fund; the words "under the statute for the distribution of the estates of intestate persons" meant no more than if for these words there had been substituted the words "by law"; & the heir-at-law of the last surviving child was therefore entitled to the real estate.—Re HUGHES, LODDIGES v. JONES, [1916] 1 Ch. 493; 85 L. 7346. Gift to statutory next of kin—Distinguished from similar limitations.]—There is no such character in law as the heir of a living person or as his statutory next of kin. There is a wide difference for this reason, between a gift to such of the "children" or "nephews" or even "kindred" of A. who shall be living at his death, & a gift to those who shall then be his statutory next of kin. During A.'s life there may be children, nephews or kindred. Each of them has probably sufficient interest though contingent to take proceedings to protect the fund. . . . Some or all of them might be made defts. in an action to administer the trusts. Neither of these things can be done where the gift is to statutory next of kin. They have no existence whatever in law while the propositus is living (KAY, J.).—Re PARSONS, STOCKLEY v. PARSONS (1890), 45 Ch. D. 51; 59 L. J. Ch. 666; 62 L. T. 929; 38 W. R. 712.

There was one child only, who was born after testator's death, & who died three years old. The widow married again:—Held: the class to whom the residue was given over was to be ascertained at testator's death, & not at the death of the child, & the widow was not excluded.—STARR v. NEWBERRY (1857), 23 Beav. 436: 53 E. He then gave the residue of his personal property to trustees, to pay the income to his daughter Ann for life, & after her death the capital to be divided equally between his next of kin, but exclusive of his nephew Leonard & his two nieces, Mary & Emma, to whom he had previously given legacies:—Held: the widow was not entitled to a share of the residue as one of the next of kin of testator, but that his daughter Ann was entitled as next of kin.

7380. ·.]—Testator directed the trustees of his will to raise & set apart six sums of £15,000 each, & to hold each of the same upon trust to pay the income to a niece (or nephew) for life, & after her (or his) death to her (or his) husband (or wife), such husband (or wife) to take only half the income if there were issue, &, after trusts in favour of the issue, declared that " in the event of the death of the said niece " (or nephew) " without issue, or in the event of her " (or " his ") " having issue & of such issue happening to die before becoming entitled to the whole of the said trust fund of £15,000," the trustees should stand possessed of the same " subject to the aforesaid provisions in favour of my said niece " (or " nephew ") " & her " (or " his ") " said husband " (or " wife "). " Upon trust for my next of kin, whoever they may be, living at the time of the trusts failing as aforesaid, except the children or other descendants of my nephew T. W. deceased."

The residue was given to the six nephews & nieces, each of whom was tenant for life of one of the sums of £15,000.

The testator was seventy-three years old when he made his will, in 1854, & he died in 1855. The six nephews & nieces were his sole next of kin at the time of his death, & would have been his sole next of kin if he had died immediately after making his will. S., who was the last of them, died in 1902, without issue, leaving a widow, who died in 1909 :—Held : although the class of next of kin was to be ascertained at the time of testator's death, only those took who survived the time when the previous trusts failed, & on the death of the widow of S. his £15,000 fell into residue.

Of course, in every case of a gift " to my next of kin," or " my nearest relations," or any gift of that kind, primâ facie the rule is, & I think it is not only a rule of construction, but the natural meaning of the words, that the class is to be ascertained at the death of testator. When testator dies, certain people answer the description of his relatives, or his next of kin, or his nearest in blood, or any of those expressions ; & it is difficult to see in the present case, if I am right in the construction I put on the words, namely that he is contemplating a class some of whom may survive, & some of whom may die before a certain period, at what other time the class is to be ascertained than at the date of testator's death. Thus it appears to me that the most natural construction, apart from authority, & apart from those particular circumstances to which I have already referred, is that this is a gift to the next of kin, to be ascertained at testator's death, but that any one of the class so ascertained, in order to take under the ultimate gift, has to survive that period.

It is always possible for testator to say that the class is to be ascertained at a later time, & if the testator makes a gift to a tenant for life, & " after the death of the tenant for life to the persons who shall then be my relatives or my next of kin," it is perfectly clear that, apart from any reference to Statute of Distributions, the class is to be ascertained at the death of the tenant for life in accordance with the express language of testator (PARKER, J.).—Re WINN, BROOK v. WHITTON, [1910] 1 Ch. 278 ; 79 L. 7381. 7387. Administration suit to ascertain class—Parties—Persons who may be next of kin at future period—Defendants.]—(1) Testator directed one-half of the interest of his residue to be paid to his daughter & only child, & the other half to his wife, during their joint lives; & that, if his daughter survived her mother or married & left issue, then that the whole of the capital should be paid to her, after his wife's death; but if she died first, without marrying or leaving issue, then that the trustees should accumulate the interest of the residue so far as it was not directed to be paid to his wife, & that, on her death, one-half of the capital should be divided amongst his nearest of kin, & the other half amongst his wife's nearest of kin. The daughter was testator's nearest of kin at his death. She died a spinster, before her mother. At the mother's death testator's sister was his nearest of kin:—Held: by "my nearest of kin," testator meant his nearest of kin at his own death, & not at the death of his wife; &, the personal representative of his daughter, & not his sister, was entitled to one moiety of the residue.

S., one of the daughters, having attained twenty-one, settled her £5,000, upon herself & children, with a trust in default of children for the next of kin of testator, according to his will. (a) In General.

7432. Word of flexible meaning — Construed according to intention of testator.]—The word "family" admits of a variety of applications, & the construction to be put upon it in a particular will must depend upon the intention of testator, to be collected from the whole context of the will.

Where a testator directed his business to be carried on by his wife & son for the mutual benefit of the family, & devised his property in trust that at his wife's decease the whole of it, as well free-

7435. ——.]—(1) The primary meaning of the word "family" in a will is "children."

A testator directed the interest arising from all his real & personal property to be paid to his wife during her life, & after her decease to be equally divided amongst all his family that should be then living when they should attain the age of twenty-one years. At the date of his will he had seven children living, some over & others under twenty-one, & some married, with children:—Held: under the word "family" children alone could take.

(2) The word "family" has various meanings. In one sense it means the whole household, including servants, &, perhaps lodgers. In another sense it means everybody descended from a common stock, that is to say, all blood relations; & it may, perhaps, include the husbands & wives of such persons. In the sense I have just mentioned, the family of A. includes A. himself; A. must be a member of his own family. In a third sense, the word includes children only; thus when a man speaks of his wife & family, he means his wife & children (JESSEL, M.R.).—PIGG v. CLARKE (1876), 3 Ch. D. 672; 45 L. J. Ch. 849; 24 W. R. 1014.

Primary meaning children only—To exclusion of parents.]—Testator, after giving several specific & pecuniary legacies, bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to be divided between the three families, Alexander, who married my niece A., May, who married my niece B. & W., who married my niece C. The nieces & their husbands were dead, all leaving children, some more or less in number, & the question was whether the children should take the residue per capita or per stirpes:—Held: they should take per stirpes, testator meant to provide for the children, & not the fathers, family was an aggregate word; if the words had been children, it might have been otherwise; but as it was, one third of the residue must go to the children of each family.—ALEXANDER v. DOUGLAS (1782), Rom. 93, L. 7443. ——.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees, in trust for his wife during her widowhood, & after her death or second marriage, in trust to be divided, share & share alike, among his five sisters & their respective families if any:—Held: each sister & her children living at testator's death were entitled, in remainder expectant on the death or second marriage of the widow, to one-fifth of the residue as joint tenants.

There are . . . cases in which the ct. has put a construction on the word "family" & held it to mean "children" as it does in common parlance. . . . The question then is whether the word "family" becomes incapable of interpretation when the bequest is a bequest to the parents & their families? 7527. ——.]—Testator gave a life interest in certain funds, with remainder, " to be equally divided between all my cousins german now existing, or their representatives " :—Held : there being nothing in the rest of the will to control the primary legal meaning of the word representatives, it meant exors., & not next of kin ; & the fund went to the exors. or administrators of testator's cousins german, as part of their personal estate.

The question is, in what sense has testator here used the term " representatives." There is no doubt that this term is capable of being interpreted in any sense in which the ct. may be satisfied, from the whole context of the will, that testator intended to use it ; & the cases are numerous in which it has been held to mean one thing or another, according to the indications, collected from the whole will, of testator's intention in using it. There is, however, one rule of construction, of universal application, which admits of no exception, & which ought never, under any circumstances, to be departed from, viz., that if any term is used by a testator which has a primary or ordinary legal meaning, that is the sense in which it ought to be construed, unless the ct. is reasonably satisfied, by evidence to be collected from the will itself, of testator's intention to use it, not in that sense, but in some different sense.

It follows, from this rule, that in every case in which a question is raised as to the meaning to be attributed to any particular term used by a testator, the first thing to be done is to ascertain & fix its primary or ordinary legal meaning, & when that is ascertained, the onus lies on the party who insists on attributing to it a different meaning, to point out the evidence, if any, which the will furnishes, to show testator's intention to use the term in such different sense, & not according to its ordinary acceptation (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—Re CRAWFORD'S TRUSTS (1854), 2 Drew. 230 ; 2 Eq. (b) Who are Servants.

i. In General.

7589. Persons ministering to comfort or wants of testator—Not necessarily indoor employment.]—(1) Testator gave "to each of my servants who shall have been in my service for three years prior to my decease, & shall be still in my service, one year's wages." At the time of his death testator had land of about 700 acres in Gloucestershire. There was a house on the land in which he employed several domestic servants. He farmed practically the whole of the property himself, & in his farming he employed six labourers at ordinary labourers wages, who, if servants, complied with the other conditions of the legacy:—Held: the labourers were not "servants" within, & did not take under the legacy.

(2) Semble: the word "servants" in a legacy to servants simpliciter, ordinarily means persons of the class of domestic servants, though not necessarily employed only in testator's house, who minister in some way to his personal comfort or wants.—Re FORREST, BUBB v. NEWCOMB, [1916] 2 Ch. 386; 85 L. ii. Domestic Servants.

7592. Whether equivalent to household servants.] —Testator gave to each of his "household servants" who should have been in his service for one year previously to his death six months' wages, free of legacy duty, in addition to the wages which might be then due to him or her respectively. The servants who were & had been in the service of testator for one year previously to his death were, in addition to maidservants resident on board wages in the mansion house, a coachman, who resided in a cottage adjoining the pleasure grounds, a groom who occupied a room over stables in the park, & close to the mansion, & another groom who also occupied a room over the stables. All of them were on board wages. The question was, what persons were entitled to participate in the bequest to testator's "household servants" :— Held : (1) household servants had the same meaning as domestic servants ; the gift included only those of testator's servants who boarded in the house & took their meals there ; (2) the coachman & grooms were not included.—Re DRAX, SAVILE v. YEATMAN (1887), 57 L. T. 475.

7593. ——.]—Testator bequeathed to each of his domestic servants who should have been in his service for two years prior to his death one year's wages free of duty. There had been in testator's service for two years prior to his death a companion housekeeper & a certified male nurse. The latter did not sleep in the house, & was absent from duty for four months during the two years :— Held : (1) the companion housekeeper & male nurse were domestic servants & entitled to a year's wages ; (2) the absence of the male nurse for four months being taken with the consent of testator did not prevent the service being continuous.—Re LAWSON, WARDLEY v. BRINGLOE, [1914] 1 Ch. 682 ; 83 L. A. was the gardener of B. at a mansion, where B. formerly resided, but which for a short time previously to & at the time of the decease of B. was let by B. to M. for a short time. A., however, had never ceased to be the servant of B., but had the charge & management of the gardens at the mansion, for which he received an annual sum from B., in addition to his yearly wages. A. was not resident in the mansion, but resided in a cottage in the garden, in the same manner as he did when the mansion was inhabited by B. :—Held : A. was not entitled to a legacy as coming within the description of "a domestic servant" of testator living with him or in his service at the time of his death."—VAUGHAN v. BOOTH (1852), 16 Jur. 808.

7596. —— ——.]—There is no fixed principle of construction binding on the ct. that in the case of bequests to "domestic servants" outdoor servants not boarded by testator must be excluded. That is a question of intention to be determined on an examination of all the circumstances of each case.

Where testator, a contractor & large employer of labour, & having a house in London & also one in the country, made a bequest to "domestic servants" in his service at the time of his decease, after having in the earlier part of his will given legacies to his business employees, the following servants were held to be entitled to share in the bequest, namely, a coachman & a chauffeur, who occupied rooms over the stable & garage respectively, & a gardener who lived in a cottage provided for him at the country residence, none of them being dieted by testator.—Re JACKSON, JACKSON v. HAMILTON, [1923] 2 Ch. 365 ; 92 L. Besides domestic servants, he employed an estate cashier, a farm bailiff, a dairymaid, an engineer, a blacksmith, gardeners, carters, carpenters, gamekeepers, woodmen, bricklayers, farm hands & labourers, who respectively were paid weekly, monthly or quarterly wages as the case might be. 7608. "Clerk in the employ of E. D. & Co." —Purser.]—By a clause in his will testator bequeathed legacies free from duty to such of the persons as should at his death be in his employ, or the employ of any firm or co. of which he was a member or director at his death. There followed the names of certain persons. The clause then contained the following : "A year's salary to each clerk not included in the above list who shall have been ten years in the employ of Elder, Dempster, & Co., or Elder, Dempster Shipping Ltd." A half-year's salary or three months' salary was given to each clerk not mentioned or referred to above, who should have been five years or one year respectively in the same employ. The question was, (a) whether a purser was a "clerk" within the meaning of the clause in the will ; & (b) whether pursers engaged by Elder, Dempster & Co., as managers of various steam shipping lines were pursers in their employ within the meaning of that clause :—Held : (1) a purser was not a "clerk" within the meaning of the clause, he being a member of the crew of the ship on which he was employed in that capacity, & it was immaterial that he had certain clerical work to discharge on board such ship ; (2) the pursers in question were not in any case in the employ of Elder, Dempster & Co., for although that firm were not only managers of the various steam shipping lines, but also owned shares in the same, they were not "employers" of the pursers.—Re JONES, WILLIAMS v. A.-G. ii. "At My Death."

7621. Servant leaving employ before death of testator—Voluntarily.]—Testator bequeathed a legacy to M. in case she should be in his service at his decease. Testator was shortly afterwards removed to a lunatic asylum, & M., who was a yearly servant, voluntarily quitted the house, receiving from the family her wages up to the end of the year, which did not expire till after the death of testator:—Held: she was not entitled to the legacy.—Re SERRES'S ESTATE, VENES v. MARRIOTT (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 519; 6 L. T. 892; 26 J. P. 709; 8 Jur. N. S. 882; 10 W. R. 751.

7622. —— ——.]—Testator, who died in 1883, by his will, dated in 1876, gave legacies to his servants in the following terms: "To each of my servants, who shall at my death have been in my service twelve calendar months, or longer, one year's wages, in addition to anything owing by me, & to my gardener, Peter Grieve, £300 in addition. In 1880 Peter Grieve, who had been in testator's service for over thirty years, relinquished his situation, & when he did so testator sent him £100. The question was whether Peter Grieve was entitled to the legacy of £300:—Held: the words "& to my gardener," etc., were governed by the condition that the servant should have been in testator's service during twelve months preceding testator's death, & as Peter Grieve had not fulfilled that condition he was not entitled to the legacy.—Re BENYON, BENYON v. GRIEVE (1884), 53 L. 7623. —— ——.]—Testator who had in his employment a valet & a chauffeur, gave a legacy to his "manservant" if he should be in his employment at the date of his death. At the date of his death testator had only the chauffeur in his employment:—Held: the chauffeur was entitled to the legacy.—Re BELL, WRIGHT v. SCRIVENER (1914), 58 Sol. Jo. 517.

7624. —— Temporary absence—Service regarded by testator as continuing.]—Legacy to A. if in testator's service at the time of his decease. Parol evidence admitted to show, that, though she had quitted his house, she continued, & was considered by him as, in his service, & upon that evidence the legacy was established.—HERBERT v. REID (1810), 16 Ves. 481; 33 E. 7626. —— Wrongful dismissal.] Testator devised an annuity to a female servant provided that she should be in his service at the time of his decease. Two days before his death his son, by his authority, wrongfully dismissed her:—Held: the service intended by the will meant actual service; & as she was not in the actual service of testator at the time of this decease, she was not entitled to the annuity.—DARLOW v. EDWARDS (1862), 1 H. & C. 547; 32 L. 7628. Effect of order in lunacy against testator.]—Bequest of a legacy to the servant of testatrix, in consideration of her long & faithful services, to be paid within twelve months after the decease of testatrix, provided "she remains in my service till my death." The servant was in the service of testatrix for twenty-one years, when one of the next of kin of testatrix caused testatrix to be removed to a lunatic asylum, & upon her own authority dismissed the servant, who was desirous to continue in the service of her mistress. Subsequently an order in lunacy was obtained by the next of kin, by which it was declared that testatrix had been ascertained to be of unsound mind, & her furniture & effects were directed to be sold :—Held : the order in lunacy operated as a dismissal of the servant, & the conditional legacy to her therefore failed.—Re HARTLEY'S TRUSTS (1878), 47 L. J. Ch. 610 ; 26 W. R. 590.

7629. ——.]—Testator, K., in 1908 bequeathed to " each person in my service at my decease " a sum equal to one year's wages. Shortly afterwards he became a lunatic, & the Official Solr. was appointed committee of his person. The Official Solr. appointed O. to be the attendant of K. & O., with the committee's sanction appointed the servants of K. At K.'s death in 1915 these servants were a coachman, gardener, butler, cook, & housemaid :—Held : neither O. nor these servants were persons in the service of K. at his decease, & consequently none of them were entitled to the legacies.—Re KING, JACKSON v. A.-G., [1917] 2 Ch. 420 ; 87 L. Q. Other Descriptions.

7641. " Rest of his surviving children "—Whether eldest son included—Specific bequest to eldest son.] —Devise to the testator's eldest son of £200 also, to his three younger sons G., W., & G. & their heirs, a house & close, as tenants in common, when they come at age of twenty-one years. Also, to his wife, a house, & after her decease the same to go to his three daughters, & their heirs for ever. & his will further was, " that if any of his above named children should happen to die before they came of age, & without issue, then their property & share in any of the above bequeathed premises to be equally divided amongst the rest of his surviving children, share & share alike." The eldest son was of age at the date of the will. Two of the younger sons died under age & without issue. The eldest son & the three daughters are equally entitled with the surviving younger son to the shares of the two deceased brothers.—DENN d. BALDERSTON v. BALDERSTON (1775), 1 Cowp. 257 ; 98 E. SUB-SECT. 2.—WORDS OF ADDITIONAL DESCRIPTION.

7651. Adequate & sufficient description—Not vitiated by further erroneous description.]—Where there is a grant of a particular thing once sufficiently ascertained by some circumstance belonging to it, the addition of an allegation mistaken or false respecting it will not frustate the grant ; but where a grant is in general terms, there the addition of a particular circumstance will operate by way of restriction & modification of such grant. Where testator had freehold, customary, & copyhold estates ; & after introductory words, as to all his wordly estate, devised two rentcharges out of all his real estate, & also two copyholds in Middlesex for lives ; & subject thereto devised "all his freehold manors lands, etc., in Yorkshire & other counties & the reversion of the two copyholds to his son for life, with successive remainders in tail male to his first & other sons, with like remainders to other branches in the male line : & in default of such issue he devised all his "said (freehold) manors land," etc., to his eldest daughter in tail male in strict settlement, with like remainders to his second & third daughters : & by the residuary clause devised all other his manors, lands, etc., either freehold or copyhold (except those in the counties of York, etc., which he had before disposed of) subject to the said rentcharges in failure of issue male of his son & himself, to his three daughters as tenants in common, in fee :—Held : certain customary estates which the devisor had, with freehold property in Yorkshire did not, on failure of the male line, pass to the eldest daughter under the description of all his freehold manors, lands, etc., in that & other counties.—ROE d. At the time of his will, testator occupied a dwelling-house, outbuildings, stable, & garden at Tranmere. He had occupied also four closes of land, in all eleven acres which he had bought at the same time with the dwelling-house, outbuildings, stable, & garden ; but a year before the date of his will he had given up the occupation of those closes. He did not occupy any other lands in Tranmere, besides what would be comprised within the terms "dwelling-house, outbuildings, & garden" :—Held : the four closes of land passed by this devise.

The question comes to this, whether any lands at all, besides the croft or close purchased in 1836, passed by the devise.

This must depend upon the question, whether there is a devise of a thing certain ; for if it be, the addition of an untrue circumstance will not vitiate the devise according to the legal maxim, falsa demonstratio non nocet (PARKE, B.).—NIGHTINGALL v. SMITH (1848), 1 Exch. 879 ; 154 E. R. 375.

B. held the farm at Headington, but not the two pieces of land called the Hill Ground:—Held: the pieces of land called the Hill Ground did not pass by either of the above devises, but they passed under the residuary clause.

If there be an adequate & sufficient description, with convenient certainty of what was meant to pass, a subsequent erroneous addition will not vitiate it. The characteristic of cases within the rule is, that the description, so far as it is false, applies to no subject at all, &, so far as it is true, applies to one only. If it stand doubtful upon the words whether they import a false reference or demonstration, or whether they be words of restraint that limit the generality of the former words, the law will never intend error or falsehood. If, therefore, I have some land wherein all the demonstrations are true, & some wherein part are true & part false, they shall be intended words of true limitation, to pass only those lands wherein the circumstances are true (ALDERSON, B.).—MORRELL v. FISHER (1849), 4 Exch. 591; 19 L. 7667. ——— .]—Testatrix, by her will dated in 1888, devised the real estate to which she became entitled under a codicil to her father's will, "namely, the residence known as Orford House, in the parish of Oakley, in the county of Essex, & lands & hereditaments," in certain parishes, "in the same county," to her sister for life, with remainder over, & she then disposed of her residue. In addition to the real estate specifically named by testatrix as passing to her under the father's codicil, there was, in fact, a freehold in London, to which she was also thus entitled. There was no evidence whether she knew that it formed part of the property passing under the codicil:—Held: the specification by name & locality introduced by the word "namely" was not merely an imperfect enumeration of the properties intended to be devised, but formed the leading description, & the freehold in London did not pass by the specific devise, but fell into residue.

Then the ordinary principle & rule of law, which is perfectly consistent with common sense & reason, is this; that the entirety which has been expressly & definitely given shall not be prejudiced by an imperfect & inaccurate enumeration of the particulars of the specific gift." Now, notwithstanding this, I think I may say that there is certainly no rule that in a will where there are two complete descriptions the former shall prevail over the latter; & I cannot think that LORD WESTBURY meant to lay down positively that in a will where you have once got a complete description of a subject-matter in general & collective terms every or any subsequent enumeration of particulars must necessarily be rejected if it do not include each & every item of the particulars which would be included in the first or general designation standing by itself. Obviously, I think, much must or may depend upon the terms in which the enumeration of the particulars is introduced. It may be introduced in such a way as to show that what testator was doing was, in LORD WESTBURY'S own words, to use words plainly meant to substitute a definite & precise statement for an antecedent generality (JOYCE, J.).—Re BROCKET, DAWES v. MILLER, [1908] 1 Ch. 185; 77 L. C. lived with the son as his wife till his death & was reputed to be his wife, but she was not married to him. Testator never had any direct communication with L. C.:—Held: upon the construction of the will, inasmuch as the identity of the legatee was established by her name, the annexed misdescription of her as the son's wife did not vitiate the gift, the ct. not being at liberty to speculate as to the motive of testator in making the gift.

7680. Devise subject to existing lease—Lease for particular purpose—Fulfilled by testator in own lifetime.]—A. makes a lease to B., his wife's nephew, for twenty-one years, for payment of his debts & legacies, & at the same time by will, taking notice of the lease, devises the lands, after the expiration of the said lease, to C. his nephew & heir, & makes B. exor. A. lives twelve years, & pays all his debts himself ; & the personal estate was sufficient for the legacies. C. brings his bill to have the lease delivered up, the trusts being performed, but dismissed, the reversion only after the expiration of the term being devised to him.—BUSHNELL v. PARSONS (1703), Prec. By this devise the nephew is entitled after the death of the wife to the books & mathematical rules & instruments only.—HARPER v. LEE (1726), Mos. 3 ; 25 E. R. 236, L. C.

7682. Gift during natural life, of house with household goods—"With" conjunctive—Devisee takes only life interest in household goods.]—L. gives, by a codicil to his will, to E. during her natural life, his house in Greenwich, with all the household goods that shall be found therein at the time of his decease. The word "with" so conjoins the devise of the house & household goods, that the devisee can have no larger interest in the latter, than was expressly limited as to the former. 7688. Discretion to pay debts of testator's son—So far as son's estate insufficient.]—A son died before his father, leaving a widow, to whom he gave all his property. The son's estate being insufficient for the payment of his debts, the father, by a codicil to his will, directed his trustees & exors. to pay his son's debts, & named the son of his son his residuary devisee & legatee. The true construction of the father's codicil is, that he intended only the payment of such portion of the debts of the son as his son's estate would be insufficient to pay.—WALKER v. LODGE (1827), 3 Russ. 459; 38 E. 7702. —— ——.]—Under a devise in fee with an executory devise over, indefinite in terms, the devisee over takes a life estate only in the event of the executory devise taking effect. In such circumstances, effect is not given to any presumed intention on the part of testator that the devisee over should take the same estate as the prior devisee would have taken.—DOE d. 7703. —— ——.]—Testator by his will gave his wife a legacy of £100 "for her present wants," & appointed her sole extrix. He also gave, devised, & bequeathed the rents & income of his freehold, copyhold, & leasehold property at B. to his wife, & also the rents & profits of his leasehold houses at P., & all other income of his estate, & directed that any money which should be in his house should be invested in her name in Consols. He also directed that his wife should "be at liberty, out of the proceeds of my surplus residuary estate, to erect any monument. to my memory which she may please, not exceeding the sum of £300." He also gave his wife all the household furniture, goods, & effects in his house at E., & desired that she should "have the free use & occupation of the house," & that an inventory of the furniture & effects should be made and kept therewith:—Held: the widow was absolutely entitled to the properties at B. & P., but she only took a life interest in the house at E. & the residuary estate.

The difficulty of arriving at the meaning of testator generally arises from the fact that there is no presumption what are his intentions; no such general object as one may find in a statute or in a deed, the general object & intention of which may guide one in arriving at what was the maker's general intention, to which particular expressions or provisions may be subordinate (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—COWARD v. LARKMAN (1888), 60 L. 7705. By implication.] — Testator bequeathed £1,000 to trustees, upon trust for his son A. for life, with remainder to the children of A. He then gave the residue of his estate & effects to his trustees, upon trust, for all his children in equal shares, & the heirs of their respective bodies. The following words were then added in a parenthesis : " except as to my son A. & his children, whose share, in consequence of the £1,000 set apart from him & them as aforesaid, shall be rated at £1,000 less than that of any other child." The will then declared that in case of a failure of issue of any child, the share of him or her whose issue should fail should be held on the trusts therein mentioned. Testator left freehold estates & personalty applicable to the trusts declared of the residue :—Held : the words in the parenthesis did not cut down A.'s interest in the residue to a life estate.—GREEN v. GREEN (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 480 ; 18 L. 7719. —— —.]—Testator by his will, gave his personal estate to his three daughters equally amongst them, & appointed his daughter Elizabeth his sole extrix. Testator then made a codicil to his will, which, in the material parts was as follows: "Considering that my property is but small, & that such (of my daughters) as may be married at the period of my decease, will have a provider & protector, from this consideration, my daughters remaining unmarried, or daughter remaining unmarried, to her or them, I will & desire all my property for the sole use & benefit of the unmarried daughter or daughters of mine living at the time of my death, & continue so as long as she or they shall remain living & unmarried; but should each of my said daughters named in my said will all get married, then & in that case, all property to be equally divided between them, share & share alike; my books to continue in the possession of the eldest. Should a daughter or daughters be married, & die before a division of property take place, agreeable to my intentions set forth, then & in such case, leaving a child or children, such child or children to have the proportioned share of the mother; but not leaving issue, then that share to be divided between my living daughters or living daughter."

The three daughters remained unmarried at the date of the will & codicil. One daughter, Diana, married after the date of the codicil, & in the lifetime of testator. After testator's death, the two other daughters (Elizabeth & Dorothea) then enjoyed the income of his property. Elizabeth, by her will, made her nephew, Burney, her residuary legatee. Dorothea then married, & Elizabeth, being unmarried, continued to enjoy the whole income until her death:—Held: Elizabeth's one-third share of the capital of testator's estate went to her residuary legatee, & did not survive to her sisters.—PARKER v. BURNEY (1838), 8 L. A limitation to two as tenants in common in fee, upon the death, in default of issue or appointment, of a prior devisee, will not, as to one of them, be cut down to an estate for life by a general proviso in another part of the will, whether precedent or subsequent, that any share or interest to which the party may become entitled by survivorship shall on her death go to her children as tenants in common in fee, such words not being at all appropriate to describe a moiety of an estate of executory devise; & the ct. will rather reject the proviso as mere surplusage.—GREENWOOD v. SUTCLIFFE (1854), 14 C. 7725. — —.]—Testator, by his will, thus expressed himself: "It is my wish that the sum of £10,000 be given to my dear brother M., knowing that he is not so well off pecuniarily as he ought to be with his large family, & the kind obligations which he imposes on himself in aiding poor relations, etc., & I should wish these £10,000 held by trustees for the benefit of his family, the interest paid half yearly, & the principal divided among them according to the discretion of the trustees or their exors. after the children shall have come of age":—Held: the brother M. took a life interest in the legacy with remainder to his children as tenants in common. The legacy to be secured for the children at the death of their father the tenant for life.—GLADSTONE v. GLADSTONE (1868), 18 L. T. 49; 16 W. R. 537.

7727. —.]—Gift by testator of all the residue of his estate & effects, real & personal, whatsoever & wheresoever, to his wife, E., & after her death, to be equally divided to the children, should there be any; he also appointed his wife sole extrix. 7729. ——.]—Testator appointed B. to be one of the exors. & trustees of his will & bequeathed to him, if he should prove the will, & in addition to any other benefit to which he might be entitled under the will, a legacy of £1,000, & ultimately gave a share of residue to B. By a codicil testator, after referring to the appointment of B. as an exor. & to the legacy of £1,000, revoked the appointment & legacy & appointed H. to be an exor. in the place of B., & gave H. a legacy of £200 for his trouble in acting as such exor. & declared that his will should be construed & take effect as if the name of H. were inserted in his will throughout instead of the name of B.:—Held: general direction at the end of the codicil did not operate as an implied revocation of the gift of the share of residue to B.

7731. — Implication from subsequent words.]—A. devised his real estate to his son F. during his life, remainder after his decease to his eldest son that should be then living, remainders over. F. suffered a recovery, & declared the use to himself in fee:—Held: F. took only an estate for life, & the recovery was bad.

For where a particular estate is expressly given, it shall not be altered by any implication from subsequent words; especially where such implication, if admitted, defeats the general intent of the will.—FOORD v. FOORD (1730), 3 Bro. Parl. Cas. 124; 1 E. R. 1219, H. L.

7732. ——.] Testator gave the income of all the residue of his property, subject to two annuities, to his wife for life; & after her death, to his son for life; & then bequeathed, a second time, the residue of his property to his son, excepting all money in the funds, which he gave to the children of his son:—Held: after the death of the wife the son took the income of all money in the funds "for his life," as well as all the residuary property, since a preceding unambiguous gift cannot be cut down by subsequent implication.—"...LL v. BELL (1839), 3 Jur. 551.

7733. ——.]—Testator by will "gave, devised, & bequeathed his real & personal estate to J. L. & his sons J. H. L. & J. L. their respective heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, equally to be divided between them as tenants in common, & not as joint tenants"; & by a codicil thereto the testator declared "that if any of the devisees named in his will should die in his lifetime, it was his will & desire that the estate & interest devised by his will to him or them so dying should go to the survivors or survivor of them, & the heirs, exors., administrators & assigns of such survivor." J. L., the father, died in testator's lifetime:—Held: his share passed under the codicil to his two sons, as joint tenants, & not as tenants in common; & J. L., who survived J. H. L., took the whole of that share, to the exclusion of the children of J. H. L.

Words in one devise giving a clear interest to a party are not to be cut down because in another devise testator has so limited the interest given to the same party.—LEIGH v. MOSLEY (1851), 14 Beav. 605; 18 L. T. O. S. 84; 51 E. R. 417.

7734. —.]—Testator, by his will, dated in 1853, gave the residue of his property to his three brothers & nephew for their lives, as tenants in common; & after the decease of his brothers & nephew, then in trust for their heirs & assigns, as tenants in common: provided always, that in case any or either of their children should die under twenty-one, without leaving issue, the share of each child so dying should be in trust for the survivors or survivor; but in case any or either of such children should die leaving lawful issue, then the share of each such child to go to his or her child or children; & if there should be only one such child of his brothers or nephew who should attain twenty-one or be married, then in trust for such child, his or her heirs & assigns for ever. Upon a bill for the construction of the will:—Held: it must be assumed that there was an omission of a gift to the children of testator's brothers & nephew after the gift to them, & the will must be read as giving the brothers & nephew a fee in the first clause of the devise, which was cut down to a life estate in the event of their having children, with a devise in fee to the children.—SPENCE v. HANDFORD (1858), 27 L. 7753. Gift cut down for limited purpose—Failure of purpose.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees, upon trust, to raise therefrom £5,000 for his daughter E., & to place out his daughter's legacy at interest, & pay the dividends to her during her life, for her separate use; &, after her decease, he bequeathed the legacy so given to her to her children; & he authorised her, if she married, to appoint the interest to her husband for his life if he survived her; & if his personal estate should not be sufficient to raise the legacy so given to his daughter, then he authorised it to be raised out of certain real estates. By a deed of appointment, of even date with the will, testator & his wife charged certain other real estates with £1,950 in favour of their daughter upon the same trusts as were expressed in the will with an ultimate gift over, in default of children, to the daughter absolutely; & by a codicil, also of the same date, after reciting the appointment, testator directed that this £1,950 should be taken as part of the legacy given to her by the will, & charged the residue on certain real estate. Testator's personal estate was exhausted by the payment of his debts. Testator died the same year. In 1831 A. went to America, where he died intestate & unmarried in 1854. No part of the legacy or interest was ever paid to A., or applied for his benefit. In 1856, A.'s administrator filed this suit for the legacy, with interest since testator's decease:—Held: the first gift to A. was never taken away, except in the event of his leaving a son as above mentioned; & he having died without a son, his administrator was entitled to recover, with interest since.

7758. Absolute gift to residuary estate to A.—Subsequent specific devise to A.]—A testator by his will devised different estates, consisting of houses & land, to different devisees, some of whom were of his own name, to some in fee, & to others for life only; & by a residuary clause, devised all the rest, residue, & remainder of his messuages, land, etc., not thereinbefore disposed of, to his wife, her heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns for ever. The following clauses were added by the testator, immediately before executing the will—"I do further give to my wife, this house wherein I now live; also the cottage & all the building, cattle, & everything belonging to me in & about this house." "I also entail my land to the Spencer's male heir so long as one shall remain." Testator's own name was Spencer:—Held: the devise to the wife of the residue was not affected by the subsequent specific devise, or by the devise to the Spencers' male heir; the devise of the residue, & the specific devise to the wife, were not inconsistent, & might both stand together.—DOE d. A.'s death.]—Testatrix gave her residuary personal estate to A. absolutely. She then gave legacies to several persons after the death of A.:—Held: this did not cut down A.'s interest in the residue to a life interest.—JENNINGS v. SPARROW (1853), 1 W. R. 297.

7760. Gift for sole benefit of A.—Limitation on failure of issue.]—J. by her will, after directing all her debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, to be paid; as to all her real & personal estate, of what kind or nature soever, gave & bequeathed the same upon the following trusts: as to all her freehold & copyhold estates, or other interest she may have therein, to her husband, W. H. W. & her son W. J. W. W. the only son of W. H. W.; & herself, to hold him, his exors. & administrators, in trust, nevertheless, to & for the sole & exclusive use & benefit of W. J. W. W.; &, as to all her personal estate, she gave & bequeathed the same to her husband, on the same trusts as were thereinbefore mentioned with respect to her freehold, & copyhold estate, in trust for the sole benefit of W. J. W. W.; & she declared that his receipts alone should be a good & sufficient discharge for any stocks or funds of which she might die possessed from time to time during his natural life, & that the estates should never be sold or mortgaged; but, in case W. J. W. W. should die without issue, then for the entire use of her husband & trustee, for his natural life: Held: W. J. W. W. took an absolute estate.—ATCHISON v. LE MANN (1854), 23 L. T. O. 7761. Gift to A., her heirs & assignees.] A will contained the following clauses: "I give, devise & bequeath the whole of my property, real & personal, whatsoever & wheresoever, to my daughter E., to her heirs & assigns for ever; provided she, at a proper time, intermarries & should have no children; then & in that case I give the whole of my property as aforesaid described, to my nephew L., except £100 to my godson B., son of my brother J., when he shall attain his twenty-first year; & in case he should die before he attains the age of twenty-one, I give the same sum of £100 to my brother J., to him, his heirs and assigns for ever; but nevertheless, providing my daughter E. should not have child or children lawfully begotten in wedlock, I still give all my real & personal property to her & for her own use during her natural life, & at her death to be equally divided amongst her children then living, share & share alike, to them, their heirs and assigns for ever; & in case of the deaths of any of my daughter's children before they attain the age of twenty-one, in that case I devise & give to the survivor or survivors, equal share or shares of such sum or sums as may be, to be divided equal amongst them, their heirs & assigns for ever; and should it so happen that all my daughter's children should die except one, then the whole of my bequests to be given that child, he or she attaining twenty-one years of age; & should that one child die without issue, then I give & bequeath all my real & personal estate, whatsoever or wheresoever as aforesaid, to my nephew L. & my godson B., to them, their heirs & assigns for ever, after the death of my daughter E." E. survived the testator, & died unmarried:—Held: she became entitled to the fee simple in the real estate, & to the absolute interest in the leasehold estate.—ASPINALL v. AUDUS (1844), 7 Man. & G. 912; 8 Scott, N. R. 853; 14 L. J. C. P. 25; 9 Jur. 211; 135 E. R. 370.

7762. — — Subsequent gift to B. as successor to A.]—Testatrix by her will devised her whole real & personal estate to trustees for certain purposes, directing them to pay & make over the whole residue to B. her heirs & assignees, as sole residuary legatee. In a codicil dated a year later testatrix said, "As there is no prospect now of B. having a child, I depone & bequeath as her successor O. to succeed B. in all my landed property, plate," etc.:—Held: the fee given to B. by the will was not cut down by the codicil to a life estate.—O'REILLY v. SEMPILL (1855), 26 L. T. O. S. 50, H. L.

7763. Gift followed by gift over—Gifts over void.]—Bequest to testator's wife for life, & after her death to make a division between testator's four children, A., B., C. & D.; his sons' shares to be paid immediately, & his daughters' shares to be invested for them for life, with remainder between all their children, to become vested at the age of twenty-five, with a gift over to the children of the others who should live to attain the age of twenty-five, in case either daughter should die without leaving any child who should live to attain twenty-five; with powers for the maintenance & advancement of such children. Held: (1) the gift over was too remote; (2) the gift to the daughters in the first instance being absolute, & the attempt to limit it having failed, the absolute interest remained unaffected, so that the respresentatives of a daughter who died without children were entitled to her one-fourth share.—RING v. HARDWICK (1840), 2 Beav. 352; 4 Jur. 242; 48 E. Testator, by virtue of a power, appointed a fund to trustees for his four children, in four equal portions & subject to the trusts thereinafter contained respecting his own residuary estate. Some of those trusts were to the children for life, with remainder to their children, &, as regarded the fund subject to the power, the appointment to grandchildren was void for remoteness:—Held: the children took absolutely in the first instance, & the subsequent attempt to limit the absolute gift being void, the children took the fund absolutely.—STEPHENS v. GADSDEN (1855), 20 Beav. 463; 52 E. In case any daughter "should die without issue," the £1,000 was to be divided "amongst such of his children as might be then living, & the issue of such as might be dead, share & share alike," the issue to take the like share as the parent would, if living, have been entitled to:—Held: the gift over was on an indefinite failure of issue; there was an absolute gift of the £1,000 in the first instance to the daughters, which had not effectually been cut down, & the daughters were absolutely entitled to the £1,000.—WEBSTER v. PARR (1858), 26 Beav. 236; 53 E. 7769. Gift to married woman for her own use—"Nevertheless during her life for her separate use."]—Bequest of £1,000 to a married woman for her own use, nevertheless, during her life, to pay the dividends, during her life, for her separate use, independent of any husband:—Held: an absolute interest.

The word "nevertheless" seems to some extent in derogation of the prior gift, but I think she takes an absolute interest (ROMILLY, M.R.).—GURNEY v. GOGGS (1858), 25 Beav. 334; 53 E. R. 664.

7770. Direction to raise legacy for A.—Subsequent gifts out of A.'s interest—Gifts over.]—Testator directed his exors. to raise a legacy "to or in trust for his son." It was to be invested in the names of trustees, & life annuities were given to the son & his wife out of the income, & interests were given to the children of the son & to their issue, with gifts over:—Held: there was an absolute gift to the son cut down to the limited extent of the subsequent gifts.—SALMON v. SALMON (1860), 29 Beav. 27; 54 E. R. 535.

7771. Gift on three contingencies—Happening of first contingency passing absolute interest.]—Testator bequeathed property, at the decease of his wife, to his wife's niece, for her own absolute use, provided that she survived his wife, or if she married before her aunt's death, then the property was to go equally between her children, but if none, then to her husband. If she died unmarried before his wife, then he willed that, at his wife's decease, his property should go to other persons in the will named:—Held: three events were contemplated; one, the niece surviving the aunt, in which event she was to take absolutely; another, her dying before her aunt, leaving children; in which event the property was to go to the husband; the third, there being neither niece, husband, nor children at the death of the aunt the tenant for life, in which event it was to go over. The niece married, & had children in the lifetime of the aunt, & survived her:—Held: she was entitled absolutely.—Re SARJEANT'S TRUSTS (1862), 7 L. T. 501; 9 Jur. N. S. 116; 11 W. R. 203.

7772. Gift followed by restrictions for specified purpose—Failure of purpose.]—(1) Testator, by his will, directed his trustees holding his real estate to levy & raise for his five daughters, naming them, the sum of £1,000 each:—Held: this was in itself an absolute provision for each.

(2) If testator leaves a legacy absolutely as regards his estate, but restricts the mode of the legatee's enjoyment of it to secure certain objects for the benefit of the legatee, upon failure of such objects the absolute gift prevails.

The will directed that the sum of £1,000 each should be raised "subject to the provisoes thereinafter expressed": i.e., the trustees were to permit each daughter to take the interest for life, in case she should marry, her husband was to take the interest for life, & after the decease of any daughter unmarried or without issue, the principal was to be applied amongst all or any of his other children, etc., in such shares as the daughter dying should appoint, &, in default of appointment, amongst the surviving children or their issue in equal shares. By a codicil he revoked his will "so far as the said sum to each of my daughters is given absolutely, & I declare that in the event of any of my daughters remaining unmarried, she shall only be entitled to an interest for her natural life," & he then confirmed the gift, "subject to the restriction aforesaid":—Held: these provisions did not qualify the gift, except so far as the restriction as to remaining unmarried was concerned.

(3) Testator resided in a house at W. 7773. ——.]—Testator bequeathed to his daughter £15,000, to be kept in trust by his exors. till she should attain twenty-one or marry with the consent of her mother & half of his exors. then living, whichever might happen first, when the sum, with the accumulated interest, was to be settled on her. The daughter attained twenty-one without having married:—Held: the legacy was not directed to be settled except in the event of her marrying under twenty-one, with the consent of her mother & half of testator's exors.; & as the legacy was, in the first instance, given to her absolutely, she was entitled to it absolutely.—ARNOLD v. ARNOLD (1848), 16 Sim. 404; 18 L. 7774. ——.]—Testator gave £4,000 to his granddaughter, & directed his exors. to pay it to her on her attaining twenty-one, & to apply the interest of it for her maintenance during her minority. By a codicil he directed that his granddaughter should have only the interest of £2,000 for her maintenance until she attained twenty-three, & that the interest of the other £2,000 should be accumulated, & that, on her attaining twenty-three, his exors. should have the whole settled upon her for her life, &, after her death, to her child or children in equal proportions, so that no husband of hers might spend it. The granddaughter attained twenty-three, & died without having had a child & without the exors. having made any settlement of the legacy: Held: the gift in the will was an absolute gift, &, in the events that had happened, it was not affected by the codicil.—BELL v. JACKSON (1851), 1 Sim. N. S. 517; 61 E. R. 211.

7775. Absolute gift cut down for benefit of objects of settlement.] — Testatrix bequeathed £500 to A. absolutely, but revoked the gift by codicil, whereby she gave a like sum to A. for life, with a direction to the trustees to sell same for the benefit of A.'s children, or to purchase an annuity for A. A. died a spinster, & no settlement was made or annuity purchased:—Held: the legacy formed part of A.'s estate, & did not sink into the residue.

The general rule as laid down by authorities cited is, that whenever a will begins by giving legacies or a share of the residue to one absolutely, & then directs that the shares shall be settled on the husband & children & wife, or the children & mother, in either case the gift is only cut down in favour of the objects for the benefit of which the settlement is to be made (MALINS, V.-C.).—Re TRAILL'S TRUST (1868), 18 L. 7784. —— Gift over on marriage.]—Testatrix devised a farm in trust for E. K. for life, & "declared that if E. K. should marry," then she gave the farm to J. W. for life, etc.; E. K. did not marry:—Held: that the gift to J. W., etc., was vested independent of E. K.'s marrying again.

In the present instance, here is an estate given to one, who is a spinster, for her "natural life," which words . . . seem to express the limit of the estate devised; but these words will not be conclusive, if from the rest of the will you can show some expressions from whence it appears that the estate so limited was only intended to be an estate for the time that she should remain a spinster (ROMILLY, M.R.).—MEEDS v. WOOD (1854), 19 Beav. 215; 52 E. R. 331.

7791. ——— ———— ——.]—Testator gave his freehold estate & "property whether real or personal" to M. S. for life, & after her decease he gave all his freehold estate & property to S. H. & his wife for their lives, & after their decease he gave all his freehold property to their children for an estate of inheritance in fee simple ; but in case none should attain twenty-one, he gave his freehold estate & property to W. M., his heirs & assigns, in fee simple. He charged his personal estate with the payment of several legacies, & the residue of what he should die possessed of was to become the property of M. S. :—Held : M. S. was entitled to the personal estate, & S. H., his wife & children, took no interest in the personal estate.—HOLLINGSWORTH v. SHAKESHAFT, ANDREWS v. SHAKESHAFT (1851), 14 Beav. 492 ; 21 L. J. Ch. 722 ; 51 E. R. 375.

7792. Gift of life estate—Substituted gifts of parent's share to children—Life estate not enlarged.]—Testator devised freeholds in terms which gave life estates to his children equally, & unto the children of such children as might be dead, who were to take their parents' share only :—Held : the life estates of the children were not enlarged by the substituted gift.—STURGIS v. DUNN (1855), 19 Beav. 135 ; 52 E. Effect of limitation over on failure of issue.]—Testator being seised in fee of certain freehold land, & also of copyholds of the manor & forest of Knaresborough, which copyholds were not by custom entailable, after devising a freehold estate at H. "to the child or children which his wife should bear to him, their heirs & assigns," proceeded as follows : "I give, devise, & bequeath to my son J. S. his heirs & assigns for ever, the copyholds, amongst other property ; but, if it shall happen my said son J. S. shall die without leaving any child or children, in that case I give, devise, & bequeath all the before-mentioned estates, etc., unto my five children, illegitimate—naming them, their heirs & assigns for ever, to be equally divided amongst them, share & share alike : &, if any of my five children should die before they come of age without issue, such share of him, her, or them so dying shall go equally amongst the survivors : My will also is, & I hereby order & direct, that, if my present wife E. should leave no issue to inherit the freehold estate at H., that all the estate, at H., shall be subject to the same mode of distribution amongst my aforesaid five children as all the other property above mentioned given & bequeathed to my son J. S., in case he die without issue" :—Held : if the lands had been of freehold tenure, J. S. would under the above devise have taken an estate tail, with remainder over to the five illegitimate children—the words "child or children" being used in the sense of "issue" generally ; but, the lands being copyhold incapable of being entailed, he took a fee simple conditional, on which no remainder could be limited.—DOE d. But if she shall fortune to die without issue, or not having attained the age of twenty-one years, then I give the same to my dear wife in manner & form aforesaid." That must be, "to her & her heirs for ever & ever." Then follows a devise of the residue to his wife, & after that a proviso, "that if in case my daughter shall survive my said wife, then I give all my said lands, etc., to my said daughter, Jane, for ever & ever without impeachment." It is not easy to comprehend all that testator had in his mind; but upon these words, which give all that he had to his daughter for ever, upon her surviving her mother, there is no reason to say that he intended to give her any other estate than an estate in fee. He has omitted the word heirs; but it is impossible not to see that he meant to give her the absolute property (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—EASTMAN v. BAKER (1808), 1 Taunt. 174; 127 E. R. 799.

Therefore, where testator, being seised of lands in fee, devised them to his sister for her life, remainder to her son James " & his heir male living to attain the age of twenty-one "; & in case of no such heir male, then to such issue female, the sum of £200 to be divided between them, share & share alike; & in case no such male or female living, then the said £200 to the children of his said sister; " & the inheritance of the said estate, for want of such male issue as aforesaid, to redound to my heir male," etc. :—Held : James took a vested estate tail; the words " living to attain," etc., were not part of a descriptio personæ or a condition precedent, but a condition subsequent, defeating the estate tail if no such heir male lived to twenty-one.

These words taken all together, & construed with reference to intention, according to the rules established by numerous decisions, seem to us to import clearly an intention in testator to give to James some interest beyond that of an estate for life. There is a devise to him & his heir of a certain description, & " the inheritance " is not to over unless in default of such heir. With this : to the general intention it is the duty of the ct. to effectuate it, if the words be sufficient, & the intention be such as the law permits (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE d. 7869. ——.]—Testator by his will devised his fee simple estates to trustees to give the rents to S. M.; but in case S. M. encumbered the lands or rents at any time testator revoked the gifts of the rents " from S. M. & from his heirs male," or should S. M. not forfeit the same & should " die without male issue him surviving," he bequeathed the rents & estates to R. M. & his issue male in tail male :—Held : upon the true construction of the whole will testator's intention was clear that S. M. should take an estate tail.

When I speak of the true construction of the will I am speaking of what is, to my mind, to be attributed to this testator as his intention indicated by the language he has used. It is true that in early times before Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), certain principles of construction of wills has been established. I myself have never been quite satisfied whether or not it is wise to attempt to crystallise in a particular form the construction which is to be placed upon a written instrument without knowing what the whole of the written instrument is (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

The whole instrument must, of course, be read together, & reading the whole instrument together I find, to my mind, a sufficiently clear exposition of the gift. In his will a testator may explain what he is doing, or what he means to do by any form of words he pleases, provided he makes his meaning clear. Here, I think, the testator has made his intention clear. I find an indication of his intention in the first place in the revocation clause, but all the other circumstances point to the same conclusion. It is not a gift by implication, but it is an explanation of what he had done before (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

The Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), in terms says that a devise of real estate shall be construed in a certain way unless the contrary intention appears. That of course must be a question of what is the intention as exhibited by the written words, looking at the whole instrument together (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—CRUMPE v. CRUMPE, [1900] A. C. 127; 69 L. gift to the daughters & their descendants per stirpes. It is contended that the word "descendants" is to have the same effect as the word "issue," & that, coupled with the words "per stirpes," it would be a gift to tenants in common in tail of real estate & is therefore an absolute gift of the personalty. Whatever may be the meaning of the words "per stirpes," it must be admitted that they mean a distribution of one sort or other, not an estate tail, which is excluded both by those words & the absolute words to the parents. I am of opinion, therefore, that the word "descendants" is not a word of limitation, but purchase. I consider that the words "descendants per stirpes" import not distribution but succession.—DICK v. LACY (1845), 8 Beav. 214; 5 L. T. O. S. 70; 9 Jur. 221; 50 E. R. 84.

7911. ——.]—Testator set out a schedule of his property calling in £5,000. He then directed £1,000 to be invested in each child's name, & £1,000 in his wife's; interest to them for their life, & afterwards to their descendants, except his wife's, which was, at his death, to be sold & divided among them, except £200 to M.'s child by him. Then followed in the same paper. "The above is increased by the working up of stock to £5,500. I wish the same division & appropriation, except that, if any share falls in, it may be added to the others in case the original holder shall have no children." Testator died, leaving four daughters:—Held: by the will alone the daughters would have taken absolute interests; but by the will & codicil together they took interests which, if absolute in the first instance, were defeasible.

Then comes the expression on which the question in this case turns "& afterwards to their descendants." Now, if the will stopped there, if there were no more, I should be bound to come to the conclusion contended for by petitioners; for, where there is a gift to A. for life, remainder to the descendants of A. it is clear that if real estate, it is an estate tail; if personal estate it gives him the absolute interest (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—BIRD v. WEBSTER (1853), 1 Drew. 338; 22 L. 7914. Direction that estate should descend to heirs & successors in direct male line.]—Testator directed that an estate should be purchased by his exors., & that such estate should be made hereditary & settled upon his constituted heir. He then appointed his nephew his heir & successor, & desired that the estate should be settled upon him, & should descend to his heirs & successors in the direct male line, & in case of his nephew dying without issue, the estate to devolve upon his brother, his heirs & successors in the direct male line:—Held: the nephew was not to take as tenant in tail in possession, but the estate was to be settled upon him for life, with remainder to his sons in tail male, & afterwards to the next taker & his sons in like manner.—SHELTON v. WATSON (1849), 16 Sim. 543; 18 L. J. Ch. 223; 13 Jur. 203; 60 E. R. 985.

7915. "Offspring."]—Testator gave personalty to his son for life, & "at his death to my surviving daughters & their "offspring." Two of the daughters attested the will, one of whom died before the son—Held: the daughters only who survived the son took; the gift was an absolute one, the word "offspring" being here used as a term of limitation & not of purchase.

The word "offspring," like the words "issue" & "descendants," may be used in different senses. It may mean children only, or it may include more remote descendants. If testator had intended children only, I cannot help thinking he might have used the simple & obvious term "children" (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—YOUNG v. DAVIES (1863), 2 Drew. & Sm. 167; 1 New Rep. 419; 32 L. Devise to "A. & B. & their heirs for ever, provided that if both have issue, then both their dividends to go to the issue of their own bodies; but if but one have issue, then the premises to go to that issue," etc.:—Held: A. & B. took estates tail. A. afterwards conveyed his moiety to B. in fee by lease & release, with a covenant to levy a fine; created a base fee in B. which estate was afterwards confirmed by the fine, though that was not levied till after the death of the releasee.—DOE d. 7921. ——.]—Testator, by his will, devised as follows: "I give my house, gardens, etc., at G. to S. S. & her heirs, if she has any child: if not, then, after the decease of herself & her husband R. S. I. give it to F. M. & her heirs." S. S. had a child, who was living at the date of the will but who died four days after the date of it, in the lifetime of testator:—Held: S. 7923. ——.]—A testator devised real estates to his nephew, A., for life, with remainder to trustees to preserve contingent uses, with remainder to the first & other sons of A., in tail male, & for default of such issue, with similar remainders to his nephews, B. C. & D., for their respective lives, & their first & other sons in tail male, respectively, & for default of such issue, with remainder to the daughters of A., & their heirs, as tenants in common & for default of such issue with similar remainders to the daughters of B., C., & D. respectively, & for default of such issue with similar remainder to his sisters, X. & Y. A shifting clause provided that if any of the daughters of his nephews should become a nun, the uses limited to such daughter should cease, & the persons next in "reversion," to take according to the aforesaid limitations, should "enter into" & hold the estates as he would have been entitled to hold them, in case the person so becoming a nun had been dead, without issue of her body:—Held: the shifting clause cut down the limitations to the daughters of the nephews into estates tail.

There is a proviso, by way of a shifting clause, which expresses the meaning of testator in the clearest possible terms—that the word "heirs" in the above clause is meant to imply "heirs of the body" (MARTIN, B.).—BIDDULPH v. LEES (1859), E. 7924. ——.]—Testator by his will, dated in 1885, appointed exors., & continued as follows: "I give to my two sons . . . all my real & personal property . . . for their natural life, subject to the condition of paying" the legacies therein mentioned. "If my sons marry & have issue, I give to each of their heirs their father's share, & to their heirs for ever; if there is no male issue with either of my two sons, & there is female issue, then the father's share shall be divided between them share & share alike as tenants in common, & to their heirs for ever. Should either of my sons die without issue, then such son's share shall go to my other son & to his heirs for ever. Should both of my sons die without issue, then at the death of the last of them, I give all my real property to the whole of my grandchildren share & share alike as tenants in common, & to their heirs for ever." He then directed that his two sons should pay out of his real property any payment due & owing thereon:—Held: the two sons took the real estate in tail male & the personalty absolutely, subject to the conditions mentioned in the will.—Re SCORE, TOLMAN v. SCORE (1887), 57 L. 7933. —— ——.]—The words "lawful heirs": Held: upon the context of a will, to mean "heirs of the body."

Testator, having several children, directed the purchase of an estate for one of his daughters, "for her use & her lawful heirs," to be returned "if she died without lawful heirs," to the other children that had heirs:—Held: upon the context, "lawful heirs" must be construed "heirs of the body": the daughter took an estate tail, & that the gift over was also an estate tail.

The expression "lawful heirs," by itself, would mean heirs general; but it is to be observed that he had used the same words in the previous devise of all the real estates given to the other children in every one of the gifts over. On the construction of these words I am therefore bound to conclude that he did not mean heirs general, but heirs of the body; the consequence of which is, that he had limited the effect of the words "lawful heirs," & makes it heirs of the body: the result is to give an estate tail to the daughter (LANGDALE, M.R.).—SIMPSON v. ASHWORTH (1843), 6 Beav. 412; 7 Jur. 410; 49 E. I am not in a ct. of equity to over rule the legal construction of the limitation unless the intent of testator or author of the trust appears by declaration plain ; that is, not saying it in so many words, but plain expression or necessary implication of his intent, which is the same thing (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).

There is no doubt but that the intention ought to prevail, if it can be enforced without breaking in upon any rule of law ; & this resolves itself into a question of construction ; but the rule, that words which would give an estate tail in a freehold, are to be considered, in the case of chattels, as giving the thing absolutely ; for that no chattels can be limited over after a dying without issue ; this rule is too strong to be got over, & the several cases that have been cited to the contrary plainly depended upon particular words or circumstances (SEWELL, M.R.).—TOTHILL v. PITT (1766), 1 Madd. 488 ; 56 E. There were exactly similar provisions, in default of B. having children, as to the next son, L., & on failure of L. & his sons, then to the son of testator's daughter A. I think upon such a gift of personal estate as this, the question is—not whether the construction of the clause, taken simply word by word, would give an estate tail—but whether, regard being had to the whole will, considering that the property is personal & not real estate, there is an intention manifested that " heirs of the body " should be used in its proper sense " (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—Re JEAFFRESON'S TRUSTS (1866), L. Sect. 19.—Quantity of interest given: Sub-sect. 6, B. (b) vi.]

Testator devised freehold estate to his brother & his wife for their lives; remainder to A. his nephew & the heirs male of his body; & for default of such issue to B. in the same manner; remainder over; he gave so much of the same estate as was leasehold to his brother & his wife for so many years of the term as they or the survivor should live; & directed, that after the decease of the survivor the leasehold premises, should from time to time be held & enjoyed, & belong to the several persons in succession, who should for the time being be entitled to the freehold, so far as the rules of law would admit; & gave the same direction as to the furniture of the mansion house. By codicil, reciting that he had devised the freehold part after failure of issue male of A. to B. in tail male, etc., he revoked those limitations, & after failure of issue male of A. devised to others; & repeated the disposition he had made of the leasehold & furniture: A. takes the leasehold absolutely.—FORDYCE v. FORD (1795), 2 Ves. 536; 30 E. R. 763.

8000. —— —— Unless different intention apparent from will.]—Testator, having devised all the residue of his real & personal estate to trustees, upon trust, within six months after his decease, to raise £34,000, & having out of this sum made a provision for the maintenance of his two daughters, E. & S., during their minorities, directed, that a moiety of the interest arising from it should be paid to each daughter, on her attaining the age of twenty-one or marrying, for her separate use, during a term of ninety-nine years, if she so long lived; & that in case either of them died, leaving no child, or issue of a child, the whole of the interest should be paid to the survivor, for her separate use, during the remainder of the term if she so long lived: &, subject to these & some contingent gifts, which never took effect, he bequeathed the £34,000 to his trustees upon trust, after the decease of his daughters, for such person or persons as should, under the subsequent limitations, be entitled to the residue of his real & personal estate. In these subsequent limitatons the trustees were directed, upon each of his daughters attaining twenty-one or marrying, to yield up to her a moiety of the residue of his real & personal estates, to hold the same to her & the heirs of her body, with remainder to the other daughter & the heirs of her body, remainder to his own right heirs. In a suit, instituted on behalf of the infant daughters, for the administration of testator's estate, a decree was made for raising the £34,000; &, the personal estate proving insufficient, part of it was raised by the sale of portions of the real estate. Afterwards S., with the concurrence of the heir of the surviving trustee, suffered a recovery of her moiety of the lands to the use of herself in fee; the tenant to the præcipe being made, & the uses of the recovery, declared by a bargain & sale, in which both S. & the heir of the surviving trustee were conveying parties, but which was not enrolled within due time. At a subsequent period E. suffered a recovery of her moiety of the lands. S. died leaving children, having received out of ct. the moiety of the principal of that part of the charge which had been raised, but without having taken any steps to have the remainder of it raised. Semble: E. & S. did not take quasi estates tail in the sum of £34,000.

(1) It was argued, that, where there is a devise of real estate by limitations which give the devisee an estate tail, & there is in the same will a bequest of personal estate to the same person, with a direction that the personalty shall go in the same manner with the real estate, it necessarily follows, that the party who takes an estate tail in the real property takes a quasi estate tail, & consequently an absolute interest, in the personalty. . . . Here the limitations of the £34,000 are not made to depend on the limitations of the real estate, except after the death of E. & S. . . . Therefore, to make the words of reference to the limitations of the real estate operate so as to give the daughters a quasi estate tail in the £34,000 would completely destroy the previous bequests of the will (LORD GIFFORD, M.R.).—SMITH v. FREDERICK (1826), 1 Russ. 174; 38 E. R. 68.

8001. —— —— If surviving tenant for life.]—Testator, after devising real estates to trustees, to the use of J. D. P. for life, remainder to his first & other sons in tail male, with like remainders to J. T. P. for life, & to his sons in tail male, & to several others, bequeathed real & personal chattels to the same trustees, to permit J. D. P. to receive the profits for his life; & from his decease to permit each of the several other persons, to whom an estate for life in the real estates was before limited, as each of them should become seised of real estates under the aforesaid limitations, to receive the rents & profits thereof for his & their life & lives respectively; & from & after the decease of the last of the tenants for life as should become seised in manner aforesaid, or if none of them should so become seised, then from the decease of the J. D. P., upon trust to assign & convey the chattels to such person or persons as should then become seised of the real estates under any of the limitations aforesaid:—Held: the chattels vested in an infant, grandson of J. D. P., who was tenant in tail of the real estates at J. D. P.'s death, & not in his eldest son, a prior tenant in tail, who died in J. D. P.'s lifetime.—POTTS v. POTTS (1848), 1 H. L. 8010. —— ——.]—By a settlement of real estates made in 1877, plate, pictures, & chattels were assigned to trustees "upon trust to permit the same to be used, held, & enjoyed with the mansion house aforesaid by the person who for the time being shall be entitled to the mansion house under the limitations thereof herein contained," yet so that for the effect of transmission they should not vest absolutely in any person thereby made tenant in tail male by purchase who should not attain the age of twenty-one years. The eldest son attained twenty-one years but died in the lifetime of the tenant for life. On the death of the tenant for life in 1907, the second son, an infant, claimed to be entitled to these heirlooms as tenant in tail male in possession:—Held: a question of construction, that there was sufficient indication of intention on the part of the settlor that these heirlooms should go with the mansion house & vest only in a tenant in tail male in possession, &, they vested in the second son, though liable to be divested in the event of his dying under twenty-one.—Re CHESHAM'S (LORD) SETTLEMENT, VALENTIA (VISCOUNT) v. CHESHAM (LADY), [1909] 2 Ch. 329; 78 L. 8012. ——.]—By his will dated Sept. 28, 1900, testator gave & bequeathed all his household plate, furniture, linen, china, pictures, books & other household effects which should at his death be in or about his mansion house to trustees in trust to permit his wife to have the use & benefit thereof during widowhood & afterwards in trust "to permit the same to be held & enjoyed as heirlooms by the person or persons for the time being entitled to the said . . . mansion house under the limitations herein declared & contained, or as nearly as the rules of law & equity will permit, but so that the heirlooms shall not vest absolutely in any person hereby made tenant in tail by purchase of the . . . mansion house unless he or she shall attain the age of twenty-one years." Testator then devised his estate & mansion house in strict settlement. In 1910, testator executed two voluntary deeds, as a result of which the estate & mansion house were settled to uses differing somewhat from those of the devise in the will, which was thereby rendered inoperative:—Held: the trusts of the chattels contained in testator's will were not affected or rendered inoperative by the dispositions by voluntary deed of the real estate.—Re WHITBURN, WHITBURN v. CHRISTIE, [1923] 1 Ch. 332; 92 L. 8013. Limitation void for remoteness.]—Testator bequeathed chattels to trustees, upon trust to permit them to be used by the person & persons who, for the time being, should be entitled to the possession of his mansion house under his marriage settlement or his will, until a tenant in tail of the age of twenty-one years should be in possession of his mansion house; & then the chattels were to belong to such tenant in tail. Testator was, under his marriage settlement, tenant in fee, subject to some prior limitations, which all failed at his death; &, under his will, his brother became tenant for life, with remainder to his, the brother's, eldest son in tail, & died, leaving such eldest son then of the age of twenty-one years:—Held: the gift of the chattels to the first tenant in tail who should attain twenty-one was too remote, & the will gave the brother's eldest son no title to them.—IBBETSON v. IBBETSON (1840), 5 My. & Cr. 26: 10 L. 8014. ——.]—Testator being entitled to leasehold premises for terms of years bequeathed them to trustees, on trust to permit his grandson, B., to take the profits thereof during his life, & after his decease to permit such person who for the time being would take by descent as heir male of the body of the said B., his grandson, to take the profits thereof until some such person should attain the age of twenty-one years, & then to convey the same to such person so attaining that age, his exors., administrators & assigns; but if no such person should live to attain the age of twenty-one, then in trust to permit such person & persons successively, who for the time being would take by descent as heirs male of the body of the testator's son, father of B., to take the profits of the same leasehold premises until one of them should attain the age of twenty-one, & then to convey the same to such heir male first attaining that age, his exors., administrators, & assigns. At the death of B., the grandson, his son & heir, A., had attained the age of twenty-one, & entered into possession of the leasehold premises. Upon a bill filed against him by the next of kin of testator:—Held: A. had not a good title to the leaseholds; the bequest to the heir male of the grandson attaining twenty-one was void for remoteness, & the next of kin of testator, at his death, became entitled to their distributive shares of the property on the death of the grandson.—

8021. —— ——.]—The Earl of A., by his will, reciting that he was seised of an inalienable estate tail, settled by Act of Parliament, & also of divers purchased estates, which it was his intention to give to his eldest son, to descend with the title, devised all his said purchased estates to trustees to the use of his eldest son for life, with remainder to the use of such person or persons as might be next entitled upon such son's decease to the family settled estates, in such order & course successively & for such estates & subject to such powers, etc., as were expressed in the Act settling the family estates. Testator then bequeathed to his said son all his gold & silver plate, pictures, etc., to be held as heirlooms, & directed his exors. to make an inventory of the same. By a codicil testator declared that in addition to the articles & things by his will made heirlooms, certain other specified chattels should be considered & taken to be heirlooms, & he thereby gave & bequeathed them to his exors. as heirlooms in his family, & directed his exors. to make an inventory of the same:—Held: the bequest of the specified chattels was direct, & they vested absolutely in the first taker.—ROWLAND v. MORGAN (1848), 2 Ph. 764; 18 L. 8023. —— ——.]—A settlement made by the third Earl of Harrington declared the manner in which the mansion house & certain estates in the county of Derby should descend. A will of the settlor, made many years afterwards, gave personal chattels "in trust for the person or persons who for the time being shall under the settlement of my mansion house & estates, be in the actual possession of the same mansion house & estates, to the end & intent that all & singular such [personal chattels] may be deemed & considered as heirlooms, to go along & for ever be used & enjoyed with the same mansion house & estates so far as the rules of law or equity will permit, but so nevertheless as that the same chattels personal shall not, as to the effect or purpose of transmission, vest absolutely in any person or persons who by virtue of any settlement shall or may become seised of or entitled to the said mansion house & estates for an estate of inheritance, either in possession or reversion, or otherwise, unless such person shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or dying under that age, shall leave issue inheritable under the limitations in any settlement thereof." Testator gave his residuary personal estate to trustees, to convert the same into money, to pay debts, etc., & lay out the surplus in the purchase of real estates to be settled to the same uses as his Derby estates under the settlement. The seventh earl executed a disentailing deed of the estates. The fourth & fifth earls of Harrington were sons of the settlor & testator. The sixth earl was his grandson (being the son of the fifth earl), & he was also the first tenant in tail by descent; he died under twenty-one & without issue; he was succeeded by his cousin, the seventh earl, who was likewise a grandson of testator, and had been born between the date of the settlement & that of the will:—Held: the chattels had vested in the sixth earl, but were divested by his death under twenty-one, & without issue; the seventh earl being in actual possession of the estates under the settlement, & being also absolutely entitled to the residuary estate of the third Earl of Harrington, had become entitled to the heirlooms & funds bequeathed by the third earl.—HARRINGTON (COUNTESS) v. HARRINGTON (EARL) (1871), L. T. 663.

8025. —— ——.]—Testator by his will directed that his books & plate should be considered as heirlooms, & should pass with his real estate in the same manner as if they were an estate of inheritance at common law, & should so continue annexed to his real estate as long as the law would permit, to be inherited by the several persons who should succeed thereto; & he devised & bequeathed all his real & residuary personal estate to trustees upon trust for R. for life, & after the decease of R. for his first & other sons successively in tail male, & in default of such issue upon trust for Henry C., the eldest son of J., for life, & after his decease for his first & other sons successively in tail male, & in default of such issue upon trust for "the next eldest son of J. who shall survive Henry C." for life, & after his decease upon trust for "the first & other sons of the body of the said next eldest son of J. who shall survive Henry C." successively in tail male, & in default of such issue upon trust for his, testator's, own right heirs.

R. & Henry C. died without having married. J. died in testator's lifetime. George was the next eldest son of J., who survived Henry. F. was the eldest son of George, & the first tenant in tail under the settlement, & he died an infant in the lifetime of R. & of Henry C. :—Held : notwithstanding the death of F. before it could be known whether his father would survive Henry C., or whether there would be any issue male either of R. or Henry C., the heirlooms & residuary personalty vested absolutely in the legal personal representative of F.

The testator directed that they should so continue annexed to his said real estate as long as the law would permit, to be inherited by the several persons who should succeed to his said real estate in the manner thereinbefore mentioned, & then follow the limitations of the real estate to which I have referred. This would entitle the first tenant in tail by purchase to the heirlooms absolutely (KAY, J.).—Re CRESSWELL, PARKIN v. CRESSWELL (1883), 24 Ch. D. 102 ; 52 L. J. Ch. 798 ; 49 L. T. 590.

He also bequeathed other chattels "upon such trusts & subject to such powers as, having regard to the nature thereof & so far as the rules of law & equity will permit, will best correspond with the uses, trusts, & powers limited & declared of & concerning the B. estate, yet so nevertheless that none of the same chattels shall for the purposes of transmission vest absolutely in any tenant in tail by purchase who shall not attain the age of twenty-one years." The B. estate was limited to uses by which in the events which had happened P., testator's elder son, became tenant for life with remainder to his sons in tail male with remainder to C., the younger son in tail male. P. had no male issue. C. died in P.'s lifetime, having attained twenty-one years, but without disentailing the B. estate or the chattels, leaving one son H., & having by his will appointed his widow, J., extrix. & universal legatee. H. became tenant in tail male in possession, attained twenty-one years, & disentailed the B. estate & the chattels :—Held : the first set of chattels vested in C. as tenant in tail male in remainder & passed under his will to J. & as regards the second set of chattels the trust was executory & must be executed by the ct.—Re BERESFORD-HOPE, ALDENHAM v. BERESFORD-HOPE, [1917] 1 Ch. 287 ; 86 L. 8031. —— ——.]—By a will of 1844, testator, having devised his real estates in strict settlement, bequeathed all the chattels "in & about my mansion house, called Llanairon at the time of my decease" to his trustees upon trust to permit the same from time to time "to go & be held & enjoyed with the mansion house so far as the rules of law & equity will permit" by the persons for the time being "entitled to the possession of my real estates." This was followed by a clause precluding the chattels from vesting absolutely in any tenant in tail by purchase unless he attained twenty-one, but entitling him to the use & benefit thereof during minority :—Held : the vesting of the chattels was not postponed until actual possession of the real estates, but they had vested absolutely in the first tenant in tail by purchase on his attaining twenty-one, although only a remainderman & never in actual possession.—Re LEWIS, BUSK v. LEWES, [1918] 2 Ch. 308 ; 87 L. 8032. —— ——.]—By her will dated in 1872 testatrix, who died in 1877, devised an estate & mansion house to trustees upon trust for her niece for life, with remainder to the first son of her niece born in testatrix's lifetime who should not be entitled to a certain barony for life, with remainder to his sons & in default of sons his daughters severally & successively according to seniority in tail, with remainder in trust for every other son of the niece born in testatrix's lifetime, other than a son entitled to the barony & the issue of every such son, so that every such son should take an estate for life with remainder to his sons & in default of sons his daughters severally & successively according to seniority in tail, with remainder to every son of her niece born after the death of testatrix severally & successively according to seniority in tail, with remainders over. The will also contained a shifting clause providing that, if any son or remoter issue of the niece should succeed to the barony after becoming entitled in possession to the estate, then the trust declared for the benefit of the son or remoter issue so becoming entitled & of his issue male & female should cease & determine & the estate go over as if he were dead without issue of his body.

By his will dated in 1874 testatrix's husband, who died in 1880, settled chattels "to go & be held so far as the rules of law & equity will permit with the mansion house . . . as heirlooms, & to be held & enjoyed accordingly in succession by the several persons who shall be respectively entitled for the time being to hold & enjoy the mansion house," & other chattels "to go as heirlooms so far as the rules of law & equity will permit" with the estate.

On the death of testator's niece in 1899 her second son succeeded to the estate & mansion house as tenant for life, & he had a daughter born in 1903 who thereupon became tenant in tail in remainder. In 1919 he succeeded to the barony & the estate & mansion house then passed by virtue of the shifting clause to the third son for life with remainder to his eldest son in tail:—Held: the shifting clause was void as regards the chattels by reason of its transgressing the rule against perpetuities, & the use, in the settlement of the chattels, of the words "so far as the rules of law & equity will permit" did not avail or prevent this; therefore, the chattels had vested absolutely in the daughter as tenant in tail in remainder at birth, subject to being divested by the birth of a brother, there being nothing in the settlement of the chattels to postpone vesting until actual possession of the estate & mansion house.—PORTMAN v. PORTMAN (VISCOUNT), [1922] 2 A. 8034. Chattels bequeathed without reference to realty — Family jewels.] — (1) Jewels were bequeathed to testatrix's nephew, A. "to go & be held as heirlooms by him & by his eldest son on his decease, & to go & descend to the eldest son of such eldest son, & so on to the eldest son of his descendants, as far as the rules of law or equity will permit; & I request my nephew to do all in his power by his will or otherwise, to give effect to this my wish as to these things so directed to go as heirlooms as aforesaid":—Held: a valid executory trust was created for A. for life, with remainder to B. (A.'s eldest son) for his life, & upon the death of B. in trust for B.'s eldest son, to be a vested interest in him when he should attain twenty-one; but if he should die in B.'s lifetime, or after B.'s death, without having attained twenty-one, leaving an eldest son born before B.'s death, in trust for such last-mentioned eldest son, to be a vested interest when he should attain twenty-one. Subject to these limitations, the jewels vested in A. absolutely, & passed by his will.

Chattels to devolve with title—Right of holder of title at death of testator.]—Testatrix, after bequeathing diamonds & china to L., Baron I., declared that she made "the above bequest to Lord I. as head of the existing family," & so far as she lawfully could directed that the said diamonds & china should be "Deemed heirlooms in the family of I., & be held & enjoyed by the person for the time being bearing the title of Baron I." She then made a further bequest to "the said Baron I." L., Baron I., died in the lifetime of testatrix, being succeeded in the title by E.:—Held: although the first bequest was not executory, L., if he had survived testatrix, would only have taken a life interest in the diamonds & china, with remainder to the person who should succeed him, & consequently E. was entitled to have the chattels delivered to him, but without prejudice to the question whether he was entitled for life or absolutely.—MONTAGUE v. INCHIQUIN (LORD) (1875), 32 L. Testatrix died possessed of considerable personal estate, which comprised amongst other things a number of articles of jewellery which were at her death in a box at her bankers, which jewellery had been bequeathed to her. It was proved that it had been the practice of testatrix & also of the former owner to send such box for safe custody to the bankers when they respectively were away from London :—Held : the plate & leasehold house passed to the sixth Earl absolutely ; the words " to be enjoyed with & to go with the title " not being sufficient in themselves to create an executory trust or to cut down the interest to a life estate.—Re JOHNSTON, COCKERELL v. ESSEX (EARL) (1884), 26 Ch. 8039. —— Right of first holder born after death of testator.]—When a trust is created to secure the devolution of chattels as heirlooms, any limitations which are to take effect by way of postponement or defeasance of an absolute interest are subject to all the rules which govern the validity of conditions subsequent.

Such limitations, therefore, must be certain, not only in expression, but also in operation, & it is essential to their validity that it should be capable of ascertainment at any given moment of time whether the limitation has or has not taken effect.

Testator, who was a peer, bequeathed chattels to trustees, upon trust to permit & suffer the same to go & be held & enjoyed with the title so far as the rules of law & equity would admit, by the person who for the time being should be actually possessed of the title, in the nature of heirlooms, & so that no person in existence at the time of testator's decease, or born in due time afterwards, & afterwards coming to the title, should have any other than a life interest in the same, & so that no person should acquire an absolute interest in the same till the expiration of twenty-one years after the decease of all such persons as should be in existence at the time of testator's decease & afterwards attaining the title :—Held : the latter clause of the limitations was void for uncertainty in operation, & the first person born after the death of testator who attained the title acquired an absolute interest in the chattels, notwithstanding that there was still living a person who was alive at the time of testator's death, & who was capable of inheriting the title.—Re EXMOUTH (VISCOUNT), EXMOUTH (VISCOUNT) v. PRAED (1883), 23 Ch. 8053. Words of inheritance in other parts of will.]—I have next to consider, whether, there being no words of inheritance in the gift to the daughters of testator, the estate given to them is for life or in fee.

I must interpret the language of this will by the aid of the Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), &, according to that Act, without words of inheritance, a fee simple will pass, unless a contrary intention appear by the will. It is said, however, that a contrary intention does appear here, because in other parts of the will words of inheritance have been used. My opinion is, that the daughters take as joint tenants in fee.

But it is difficult to treat the case of words of inheritance used as to other estates & other persons, as manifesting a sufficient intention within the meaning of the Act, contrary to that which the Act says shall be the general interpretation as to every devise with reference to which a contrary intention does not appear on the will (per CUR.).—WISDEN v. WISDEN (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 396; 24 L. 8054. Gift to several as joint tenants.]—Testator, the owner of real estate in fee, by his will dated in 1840, devised his freehold estate to his wife for her life, to his brother for life, & then to seven children of his brother by name "as joint tenants & not as tenants in common, & to the survivor or longest liver of them, his or her heirs & assigns":—Held: the devise to the seven children was a devise of joint life estates, with a contingent remainder over in fee to the survivor.—QUARM v. QUARM, [1892] 1 Q. 8055. Provision for possession & power over estate.]—Testator, by his will, dated in 1894, devised certain real estate to his two sons in strict settlement, & also gave them certain personal estate. He gave the residue of his real & personal estate to his wife absolutely, & appointed her extrix. during her life & his sons exors. on her death. By a codicil dated in 1898, he revoked his will & gave all his property to his wife, "so that she may have full possession of it & entire power & control over it, to deal with it or act with regard to it as she may think proper." In the event, however, of her not surviving him, or dying "without having devised or appointed "the whole or any part of his property, then he declared that his will should take effect as if his codicil had not been made & he appointed his wife executrix of his codicil during her life:—Held: the wife took an estate for life only with a general power of appointment.

8071. Whether gift absolute.]—When property is given to a person for life, & after his death to be at his disposal, without more, it is difficult or impossible to give the legatee more than a life interest. . . . 8072. ——.]—There is a class of cases which is excluded, those where the power of disposing of the reversion is given in addition to life estate, where those interests are severed for the purpose of introducing other estates which are distinct & separate. If the case were here of a gift to the son, & after his death to such person as he should dispose of, it might be said that this would be power & not interest. I express no opinion on that; but where the gift is to the son for life & after his death to his children, & in default of children he should be at liberty to dispose of it as he should think fit, there is reason for giving the life estate for the purpose of introducing the subsequent gift to the children, & unless the words clearly import a power, it is in my opinion an absolute interest in the son, which he may dispose of as he pleases (ROMILLY, M.R.).—Re MAXWELL'S WILL (1857), 24 Beav. 246; 26 L. 8085. —— "As she might think fit.]—Testator devised all his property to his wife, her heirs, etc., for all his estate & interest therein, for her own absolute use & benefit, & to be disposed of by her by deed or will as she might think fit:—Held: a freehold estate in fee, of which testator was a trustee, passed by the devise.—Ex p. SHAW (1836), 8 Sim. 159; 5 L. By a codicil he said "I cancel that part of my will settling on my daughters & their children my property & my sons-in-law H. & A. may dispose of the property I leave for the good of their families":—Held: the sons-in-law took absolute interests in the portions given by the will to their respective wives.—ALEXANDER v. ALEXANDER (1856), 6 De G. B. Rights of Enjoyment.

8089. Whether gift absolute—"Freely to be enjoyed & possessed."]—One devises thus: "As touching my worldly estate, I devise the same as follows; I give to my wife E. £5 to be paid yearly out of my estate at G. Item, to T. & E £5 each, to be paid twelve months after my decease. Item to my two sons T. M. & R. M. whom I make my & ordain my sole exors., all my lands & tenements freely to be enjoyed & possessed alike." T. M. & R. M. are tenants in common, & take a fee.—LOVEACRES d. 8091. —— ——.]—A gift to A. & B., "whom I appoint my exors. of all that I possess in any way belonging to me, by them freely to be possessed or enjoyed, of whatever nature or manner it may be," will pass the fee simple of real estate.

The subject of his gift is, "all that he possessed, in any way belonging to him, by them freely to be enjoyed or possessed, of whatsoever nature or manner it might be." These words are equivalent to a gift of all his property; & a gift of all property will not only pass real estate, but will pass all the interest of testator in that estate. The exception of the household furniture is of little weight here: as the prior words clearly import real as well as personal estate, it matters little that the exception to the gift happens to be of personal chattels (LEACH, M.R.).—THOMAS v. PHELPS (1828), 4 Russ. 348; 6 L. He also gave his personalty to his wife, accompanying the bequest with the following words: "I beg & request that, at her death, she will give & bequeath what shall be remaining, in such sums as she shall think proper, unto such members of her own & my family that she shall think most deserving of same":—Held: the widow took the fee in the freeholds, & the personal property absolutely.—GREEN v. MARSDEN (1853), 1 Drew. 646; 1 Eq. 8101. Licence—Permission to reside—Rent free.]—Testator devised an estate to trustees on trust to allow his widow to reside in the mansion house during widowhood, rent free, with use of the furniture, plate, & stores, & subject thereto for his nephew, C., for life, with remainder to his issue in tail, with remainder for certain other nephews in tail male. Declaration that every person who, under those limitations, should become entitled as tenant for life or in tail male to the actual possession or receipt of the rents & profits of the estate should, within one year after becoming so entitled take the name of V., & in case of neglect the limitations in his favour should determine, & the estate go to the person next in remainder as if the person so neglecting being tenant for life were dead, or being tenant in tail male were dead & there were a general failure of his issue inheritable thereunder; but such determination, in case of a tenant for life, was not to prejudice his issue, but the estate should remain in the trustees during his life, who should pay the rents to the person entitled to the next vested estate in remainder. Testator died in 1875. C., the tenant for life, died in 1889 without issue, & without having taken the name of V. T., the next tenant in tail, was now living & unmarried, but had not taken the name. R., the next tenant in tail, took the name of V. in 1891. Owing to a charge on the estate there had not been any profits therefrom for the persons entitled under the limitations in the will. The widow was still living:—Held: although the widow was entitled to occupy part of the estate rent free, she was not thereby tenant for life.—Re VARLEY, THORNTON v. VARLEY (1893), 62 L. J. 8134. ———.]—(1) The declaration stated, that A. H., in her lifetime, demised a certain messuage & land to deft., for eleven years; deft. covenanted with A. H., her exors., administrators, & assigns, to pay the rent: that A. H., being possessed of the reversion, died, after making her will; & that pltfs. as her administratrices with the will annexed, became possessed of the reversion. Breach, non-payment of the rent. Deft. traversed specially, that pltf. were possessed of the reversion. At the trial, it appeared that S. H., the husband of A. H., after devising his estates to his two sons, at that time minors, in fee, devised as follows: "& it is my will & pleasure, that my wife shall have the use & occupation, or annual increase, at her pleasure, of all that my farm, etc., during the minority of my sons, she keeping the premises in repair, & paying all interest, moneys, outgoings etc.; I also give & bequeath the use & occupation of all my farming stock, etc., unto my wife, her exors. & administrators, until my son, J. S. H. shall attain twenty-one years, she paying thereout unto my five daughters £500 apiece." S. H. having died, his widow, in the year 1835, made a lease to deft. for eleven years, reserving rent payable to herself, "her heirs, exors., administrators or assigns," & died in 1841. The action was brought by pltfs., as administratrices of A. H. during the minority of the sons, for the rent of the premises:—Held: the wife took an estate, not for her life, but during the minority of the sons, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.

(2) It is contended that we ought to construe the will by reference to the prior part of it, which gives her the "use & occupation" of the land. But it is plain that an estate for years was intended to be bequeathed, & that the same effect is to be given to both parts of the clause of the will (POLLOCK, C.B.).—WHITTOME v. LAMB (1844), 12 M. & W. 813; 13 L. After the date of the will the marriage was declared null by the Divorce Ct. in a suit brought by the wife against testator. After this testator died leaving the lady surviving:—Held: although if the lady had been testator's wife at his decease, the words "shall continue my widow & unmarried" might have been in substance the same as "shall continue unmarried" the reference to widowhood could not on that ground be treated as surplusage but was the principal part of the condition & that as the lady did not at testator's death fill the position of testator's widow she could not take the annuity.—Re BODDINGTON, BODDINGTON v. CLAIRAT (1884), 25 Ch. He then bequeathed his furniture, etc., to exors., as heirlooms, & gave all the residue of his estate & effects to the exors. upon trust, after the decease of the survivor of his brother & himself, to sell & dispose thereof, & invest in other real estates to be settled to the same uses as he had declared concerning the real estates devised by his will, with powers of investment in the meantime. Testator's brother died before testator. On the death of testator in 1803 H. entered into possession, & held the estates till his death in 1869. On the death of H. the persons entitled under his will took possession of the property, which was then claimed by the persons entitled under the limitations in the will of the original testator :—Held: though the first clause in the will amounted to an absolute gift, the whole will showed a clear intention to give testator's brother an estate for life only with a power of appointment, & as that power of appointment had not been exercised, the limitations over took effect.—Re STRINGER'S ESTATE, SHAW v. JONES-FORD (1877), 6 Ch. E. by her will gave all her estates & effects, both real & personal, to A. absolutely, & by a codicil which she directed to be taken as part of her will she gave, after the death of A., "all property of mine which may then be remaining," except a house & furniture, "to my brother W." & three other persons in certain proportions, "my brother W. to have one-half of the property for his whole and sole disposal." A., who survived E. a year & eight months, remained in possession of the whole of the property, & by her will gave a portion of it to W. for life only, & after his death to other persons. On bill filed by W., for administration of both estates :—Held: the intention of E. was, construing the two instruments together, A. should have a life interest only in her property.—BIBBENS v. POTTER (1879), 10 Ch. D. 733 ; 27 W. R. 304.

Annotation :—Consd. Re Sheldon & Kemble (1885), 53 L. T. 527.

8173. —— ——.]—By his will, dated in 1870, testator gave all his household furniture, & all his real & personal estate, & sums of money in the house, & all sums of money in the savings bank, & all other his estate & effects, with the exception of two £5 shares in a certain co., unto his wife, & he gave to his sons the two £5 shares, & he also desired that, at the decease of his wife, what might remain of his property should be equally divided amongst his surviving children. The question was whether this was an absolute gift of the property to testator's widow, or whether there was a trust in favour of testator's children :—Held: testator's widow took only a life interest in the property.—Re SHELDON & KEMBLE (1885), 53 L. T. 527.

8174. —— ——.]—The principle that where there are in a will successive limitations of personal estate in favour of several persons absolutely the first of those persons who survives testator takes absolutely, although he would have taken nothing if any previous legatee had survived & taken, also applies to real estate.

Where testatrix by her will gave freeholds absolutely to A. subject to the bequest that whatever of the freeholds should remain after A.'s death should be given to a named charity :—Held: if A. had survived testatrix the gift to the charity would have been repugnant & void, & A. would have taken absolutely.—Re DUNSTAN, DUNSTAN v. DUNSTAN, [1918] 2 Ch. 304 ; 87 L. J. Ch. 597 ; 119 L. T. 561 ; 63 Sol. Jo. 10.

8175. —— Any part remaining undisposed of.]—By his will testator gave all the residue of his estate & effects to his wife "absolutely." By a codicil to his will he revoked that gift, &, after making a specific gift, gave his residue to his wife "for her own absolute use & benefit & disposal"; but, without prejudice to the absolute power of disposal by his wife of all the said residue, in case at her decease any part thereof should "remain undisposed of" by her, he gave same to two other persons equally as tenants in common, subject to the payment by them of his wife's debts & funeral expenses:—Held: testator's wife took a life interest in the residue, with a power of disposition by act inter vivos, but not by will.—Re POUNDER, WILLIAMS v. POUNDER (1886), 56 L. J. Ch. 113; 56 L. T. 104.

8176. After indefinite bequest—"If omission to make will."]—Testator made an indefinite bequest of the interest of his residue to a class of children equally, with a declaration that they should have the right to will away their shares on their deaths. There was a gift over, if they should omit to make their wills:—Held: they took absolute vested interests & not a life interest, with a power to bequeath, & the gift over was void for repugnancy.—WEALE v. OLLIVE (No. 2) (1863), 32 Beav. 421; 55 E. A. For Benefit of Particular Objects.

8177. Whether donee takes beneficial interest—Words expressing testator's motive for gift.]—(1) Testator, by his will, desired that everything, during the life of his wife, should remain as it was, for her use & benefit; & after her decease he gave his real estate to his male heir, & his personal estate to his children; adding, that he gave the above devise to his wife, that she might support herself & her children according to her discretion, & for that purpose:—Held: the widow took an absolute interest for her life in the real & personal estate.

(2) The general principle is this: you give property to a person with a direction to apply an indefinite amount in a particular mode. As the ct. cannot guess how much is to be given, the gift is absolute, notwithstanding the indefinite direction (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—THORP v. OWEN (1843), 2 Hare, 607; 12 L. J. Ch. 417; 1 L. T. O. He then directed the corpus, except that necessary to produce the £100 a year, to be paid to his four children, as to the shares of sons at twenty-one, & as to shares of daughters, one moiety on marriage & other moiety at twenty-one; & then he directed that after the decease of his wife, or her ceasing to be his widow, the sum which was required to produce the £100 a year, should be paid to his four children, in equal shares & proportions, in the like manner, & at the respective periods above mentioned, if his wife should be dead, or ceasing to be a widow at those periods:—Held: the gift of the income of the residue to the wife during widowhood was not cut down by force of it being a gift for bringing up, education & maintenance, or by the subsequent gift to the children.—LEIGH v. LEIGH (1848), 12 Jur. 907.

B. To Benefit Donee in Particular Manner.

(a) In General.

8204. Whether absolute gift to donee—General rule.]—Testator ordered & empowered the trustees of his will, at their free will & pleasure, to sell part of the trust property, &, out of the proceeds, to pay not exceeding £2,000 to his son, for setting him up in business, or for such other purposes as testator's wife should think proper & most beneficial to him. The son survived testator, & afterwards died without having entered into business, & without the £2,000, or any part of it having been raised.

It is a well-known rule that, where a legacy is given, but the application of it is prescribed by testator himself or left by him to the discretion of some other person, if that discretion is not exercised or an accident happens which prevents the employment of it in the way which is contemplated, the gift prevails. The mode of application may fail, but that will not interfere with the substance of the gift (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—GOUGH v. BULT (1848), 16 Sim. 45 ; 17 L. J. Ch. 401 ; 13 L. T. O. S. 86 ; 60 E. R. 789, L. C.

Annotation :—Apld. Re Stanger, Moorsom v. Tate (1891), 60 L. J. Ch. 326.

8205. —— ——.]—If a gross sum be given, or if the whole income of the property be given, & a special purpose be assigned for that gift, this ct. always regards the gift as absolute, & the purpose merely as the motive of the gift, & therefore holds that the gift takes effect, as to the whole sum or the whole income, as the case may be. Thus, where there is the gift of a sum to apprentice a child, or to buy a commission for a son, the ct. gives effect to the entire gift ; & whether the sum can or cannot be applied for the purpose of buying the commission or apprenticing the child, the ct. holds that the child is entitled to the whole of it. In the present case, the trust is plainly very different. It is a trust to apply "the whole or part" for the purposes specified, namely, for the maintenance, attendance, & comfort of testator's brother. I do not think it confers on him an absolute right to have the whole income applied, except in the event of a case being made, that the whole was wanted for the specific purposes directed by the will (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—Re SANDERSON'S TRUST (1857), 3 K. & J. 497 ; 26 L. 8242. To pay off debt due from trustees.]—By deed certain real estates were settled to the separate use of M., a married woman, for life, without power of anticipation ; remainder to her son W. for life ; remainder to his first & other sons in tail male ; remainder to the second & other sons of M. in tail male, with divers remainders over ; provided that the trustees therein mentioned might during the life of M. fell timber on the estate & should invest the proceeds of the sale thereof, & pay the income thereof, during M.'s life, to the person entitled to the rents of the estate ; & after her decease, should pay the principal among all M.'s children, except an eldest or only son, entitled to the estate in tail, or in tail male, under the preceding limitations, as M. should appoint, & in default, equally. Pltf. afterwards became a trustee of the settlement, & he & his co-trustee J., cut down timber, which produced £1,500, of which £1,000 was paid, at M.'s request, & on a promise by J. to indemnify pltf., to M.'s husband, to make certain repairs on the estate ; & the remaining £500 was invested in Consols. M.'s husband, shortly after the payment of the £1,000, invested £500, part thereof, in Consols, in the names of the trustees ; but J. was never aware of that fact. J. died in 1847, having by his will, which recited the above facts, except the last-mentioned investment of £500, directed his exors., in order to indemnify his co-trustee, & both their representatives, at the end of twelve months after his death, to pay the sum of £1,000 clear of legacy duty, unto such person or persons as would be then legally or beneficially entitled to the moneys arising from the sale of the timber, provided that such person or persons should accept the same in discharge of any claim which they might have in respect of the sum of £1,000, & should execute an effectual release. M. had four children, one of whom was a married woman :—Held : the persons beneficially interested in the timber money were entitled to the whole legacy, if they accepted it as in the will mentioned notwithstanding that testator had made the bequest in ignorance of the fact that the trustees were only liable for £500 instead of £1,000, & notwithstanding that by reason of the coverture of two of the cestuis que trust a proper release could not be given.—STEUART v. FRANKLAND (1852), 18 L. 8250. To minimise effect of disendowment.]—Testator, who died on Oct. 21, 1916, bequeathed a sum of money for the augmentation of the benefices within the Archdeaconry of Monmouth so as to minimise the effects of disendowment. By the Welsh Church Act, 1914 (c. 91), the Church in Wales was disestablished as from a subsequent date to be fixed by Order in Council. Disendowment was not to become operative until the date of disestablishment, but incumbents appointed after the passing of the Act were to get no compensation. By the Suspensory Act, 1914, the date of disestablishment was further postponed :—Held : the legacy was payable forthwith or within one year from testator's death.—Re LLANGATTOCK (LORD), JOHNSON v. CENTRAL BOARD OF FINANCE OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND (1918), 34 T. 8328. ——.]—Testator by his will appointed A. & B. his exors. & trustees, & after providing a fund for the payment of his debts & legacies. & all legacy duties, gave his residuary estate to his trustees for their absolute use & benefit. By a codicil he appointed C. an additional exor. & trustee of his will, & declared that the residuary bequest should be read as if the names of A., B., & C. were inserted instead of the names of A. & B., "so that C. should participate in such bequest free from legacy duty with A. & B." A. died before testator :—Held : the effect of the codicil was to make A., B., & C. tenants in common of the residue, & A.'s share lapsed to the next of kin.

I cannot doubt, having regard to the authorities respecting the effect of such words as "amongst" & "respectively" that anything which in the slightest degree indicates an intention to divide the property must be held to abrogate the idea of a joint tenancy, & to create a tenancy in common (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—ROBERTSON v. FRASER (1871), 6 Ch. 8338. ——.]—Testator gave all his estates, real & personal, to his exors., in trust to be disposed of by them as after mentioned. He then gave all his real estates, houses, & lands, to his wife, for life: "& after the decease of my wife, I give my houses, lands & estates in B. to J. B., but at his death, I will that the whole shall be for the use of J. B.'s wife & children, & which children, at the death of their mother, shall inherit the same jointly, during their lives; & if the children shall die before they arrive at the age of twenty-one, I will that my houses & estates at B. go to H.," who was testator's heir.

J. B. & his wife had three daughters & one son. The daughters were living at the date of the will, & at testator's death. The son was born afterwards. After the death of J. B., but in the lifetime of his wife, two of the daughters died intestate & unmarried, one before & the other after attaining twenty-one, leaving their brother their heir. After the deaths of the prior devisees, the son & the surviving daughter, both of whom had long attained twenty-one, executed a deed in the nature of a recovery, by which they limited the lands in B. to the use of themselves & their heirs as tenants in common:—Held: they took an estate in fee simple, as tenants in common, in the lands in B.—SPRY v. BROMFIELD (1841), 10 Sim. 94; 7 M. & W. 545; 10 L. J. Ex. 457; 59 E. R. 548; subsequent proceedings, 10 Sim. 224.

Annotation:—Reid. Ruck v. Barwise (1865), 2 Drew. & Sm. 510.

8340. ——.]—Testator bequeathed property to a tenant for life, & after her death to her children:—Held: the children took as joint tenants.

Semble: had the gift been made contingent on their attaining twenty-one, they would have taken as tenants in common.—RUCK v. BARWISE (1865), 2 Drew. & Sm. 510; 35 L. J. Ch. 16; 12 L. T. 841; 13 W. R. 1016; 62 E. R. 713; sub nom. BUCK v. BARWISE, 6 New Rep. 375.

8341. Gift to next of kin—According to Statute for Distribution.] — Bequest of personal estate "upon trust to pay the dividends to J. B. for life, & then to T. B. for life, & the life of the survivor; & after the death of the survivor, the trustee to stand possessed of & transfer the same to such person or persons as should at the time of the decease of J. B. be entitled thereto as his next of kin under the Statute for the Distribution of the effects of intestates." At the death of J. B. there were two next of kin of testator, of whom one died shortly afterwards:—Held: they took the fund as tenants in common.—HORN v. COLEMAN (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 169; 22 L. J. Ch. 779; 20 L. T. O. S. 290; 17 Jur. 408; 1 W. R. 194; 65 E. R. 73.

8343. —— ——.]—The rule of construction established by Bullock v. Downes, No. 8342, ante, is that where there is a gift to a class to be ascertained by reference to Statute of Distributions, not only the objects of the gift, but the shares & manner in which those objects take, are primâ facie to be ascertained according to the statute. Such a rule of construction ought not to be frittered away by nice distinctions as to the particular words used. The members of a class to be so ascertained will therefore, unless the will shows clear evidence of a contrary intention, take as tenants in common & not as joint tenants.—Re NIGHTINGALE, BOWDEN v. GRIFFITHS, [1909] 1 Ch. 385; 78 L. J. Ch. 196; 100 L. T. 292.

8344. Gift to A. & B. "or their heirs."]—Testator gave his real & personal estate upon trust as to the income for his brothers E. & C. or the heirs of their bodies, & declared that if either brother should die leaving heirs of his body, then the share of such brother should descend to such heirs, but if one brother should die without lawful issue then the whole income should be paid to the surviving brother, or in case of his death also to his lawfully begotten heirs; but in case both brothers should demise without issue lawfully begotten, then the whole property should be divided among testator's nearest of kin; & testator appointed exors., with power to appoint other exors., as to them might seem fit, also with full power to get in & receive all moneys or securities for money, & to sell, dispose of & convert into money all other his real & personal estate either by public auction or private contract, as to them should seem meet:—Held: the brothers took the real estates as tenants in common in tail, with cross remainders in tail, with remainder to the next of kin in fee.—GREENWAY v. GREENWAY (1860), 2 De G. 8345. Gift to parents & children—Children substituted for deceased parents.]—Gift among all & every testator's "brothers & sisters who should be then living, & the children of such of them as should be then dead; such children to take their respective parent's share only":—Held: the children of testator's brothers & sisters took their parent's share as tenants in common, inter se.—SHEPHERDSON v. DALE (1866), 13 L. T. 699; 12 Jur. N. S. 156.

8346. Disposition of fund at discretion of executor.]—Testator gave £3,000 to his exors. upon trusts for the benefit of M. during her life, & from & immediately after her death "in trust for the benefit of her children, to do that which they, my exors., my think most to their advantage." The exors. died in the lifetime of M.:—Held: the children of M. who were living at the time of her death were entitled to the fund in equal shares as tenants in common.—Re PHENE'S TRUSTS (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 346.

8347. Gift with maintenance & advancement clause.]—Testator devised & bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust, in the events which happened, after the death of the life tenant, for division between & amongst the members of a class then living, & the issue per stirpes of any of them who should be then dead. He gave his trustees a power "during the minority of any legatee entitled" under the will, to apply to maintenance the whole or part of "the annual income to which any such infant legatee shall for the time being be actually or presumptively entitled" & a power "from time to time during the minority of any male legatee" under the will, to apply to his advancement "all or any part of the capital to which such legatee shall be presumptively entitled for the time being." On the death of the life tenant a summons was taken out for construction of the residuary gift:—Held: the gift to "issue" of deceased members of the class was to be restricted to children of such members, the maintenance & advancement clauses applied to such children; & therefore such children took as tenants in common in equal shares & not as joint tenants.—BENNETT v. HOULDSWORTH (1911), 104 L. T. 304; 55 Sol. Jo. 270.

8348. ——.]—An advancement clause that applies during the minority of "any person entitled to a benefit" under a will is a sufficient indication that the members of any class, whether that class be original or substitutionary, are to take as tenants in common.—Re DUNN, CARTER v. BARRETT, [1916] 1 Ch. 97; 85 L. J. Ch. 168; 113 L. T. 1206; 60 Sol. Jo. 175.

Annotation :—Distd. Re Ward, Partridge v. Hoare-Ward, [1920] 1 Ch. 334.

8349. ——.]—An express power conferred on trustees to apply all or any part of the "annual income arising from any property or share or shares of property" to which any minor or minors may be entitled, or presumptively entitled under the will, in or towards the maintenance or advancement of such minor or minors is a sufficient indication that the members of the class to which it applies are intended to take as tenants in common & not as joint tenants.—Re WARD, PARTRIDGE v. HOARE-WARD, [1920] 1 Ch. 331; 89 L. J. Ch. 181; 122 L. T. 336; 64 Sol. Jo. 115.

8350. ——.]—Testator, who died in 1878, bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees upon trust out of the income thereof to pay certain annuities & to stand possessed of the surplus income upon trust to pay & divide the same among such of the children of his daughter S. as might be living at his death in equal shares for their lives, & after the death of any or either of those children leaving a child or children surviving such child or children were to be entitled to the share which would have been his her or their parents' if living. Upon the death of the survivor of S.'s children his residuary estate was to be divided amongst their children living at the decease of such survivor. The will gave power to the trustees to pay & apply such parts as they should think fit of the income of the share or interest to which any minor taking any interest under the will should or might for the time being be entitled under the several trusts thereinbefore declared for or towards the maintenance, education or putting out in life of such minor in the meantime or until their respective shares & interests should become vested or payable. It was further declared that any interest given by the will to any person who might be or become a married woman should be for her separate use free from marital right or control without power for her to anticipate the same interests or any of them.

The daughter S. predeceased testator having had five children all of whom survived testator. Three of them afterwards died & G. one of those deceased children, left him surviving four children. Upon the death in 1923 of one of those four children a question arose between the personal representative of that deceased child & the three surviving children whether the children of G. were entitled as joint tenants or as tenants in common to the share of the surplus income of the residuary estate during the lives of their aunts the two surviving children of S. :—Held: neither of the clauses as to separate use or restraint on anticipation had the effect of converting the primâ facie construction of that gift of the income to those four grandchildren of S. as joint tenants into a gift to them as tenants in common.—Re GARDNER, ELLIS v. ELLIS, [1924] 2 Ch. 243; 93 L. 8353. ——.]—Testator devised all his real estate to his sister for life; remainder to her children as she should appoint; for want of appointment, to all her children & their heirs as tenants in common. His sister having two daughters, by a codicil, declared to be a codicil to his will not then at hand, he gave one of them an annuity; & directing his annuities to be paid out of his 3 per cent stock he charged them on his real estate in case of a deficiency; &, directing the residue of his personal estate to be invested in freehold lands & hereditaments, he recommended to his sister to settle & convey or join with her husband in settling & conveying all his estates & property, which she might derive from him after his decease, to the use of her two daughters for life in such parts shares & proportions as she should approve, with remainder to their respective issue, & cross-remainders, & the usual powers & clauses in strict settlement. Testator's sister died in his life; & her two daughters were his co-heiresses. Some real estates were purchased between the executions of the will & codicil. As to the real estate the will is not revoked, but is republished, by the codicil; & the two nieces are entitled to all the real estates & to those directed to be purchased as tenants in common in fee.—MEGGISON v. MOORE (1795), 2 Ves. 630; 30 E. her personal estate, unto & amongst A., B., C. & D. or unto & amongst such of them as should be then living; & in case D. should not be then living, testatrix directed that her share of & in the residue should go amongst D.'s children. At the death of the surviving annuitant, A., B., C., D. were dead, but D. had left two children, who claimed the whole residue of testatrix's property.

If the £800 was effectually given separately from the residue then, in the events which had happened, the residue had been given to the legatees as tenants in common, the words used being such as to create a tenancy in common, & the residue did not go exclusively to them (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.). —HAMMATT v. LEDSAM (1845), 4 L. 8441. ———.]—Testator devised thirteen houses to his four sons, share & share alike, to hold subject to certain conditions. First, it was his will that none of the houses be disposed of, either by division, assignment, transfer, or sale, without the written consent of each & every of his four sons, their heirs, assigns, or representatives. Secondly, it was his will that, until the before-mentioned distribution of the property was made, the rents should come into one common fund & be divided equally among his four sons. Furthermore, it was his will that, if there should be no lawful distribution of the property during the life or lives of his four sons, it should then devolve to the children of his four sons. &, in case any of them should die without issue, then it was his further will that the share of the rents possessed by them or him should devolve to the widow or widows of such deceased son or sons, to be by them received during their widowhood, & afterwards it should devolve to the survivor or survivors of his other sons, that is to say, to his grandchildren & to their heirs & assigns, to be divided equally among them :—Held : the four sons took the houses as tenants in common in fee, & the executory devise over to their children was void.—SHAW v. FORD (1877), 7 Ch. In one of the devises contained in the will, an estate in fee was devised to testator's grandson, on attaining twenty-one years; & by a concluding clause of the will, testator, as to the residue of his estate not before specifically disposed of, devised & bequeathed the same to his eldest son, to hold to him, his heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, according to the nature of the several estates, absolutely for ever; & testator also authorised his trustees, at their discretion, from time to time to grant leases of any part of the premises in trust, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, at the best rent that could reasonably be obtained, but without taking any fine for such leases:—Held: (1) the estate of the trustees & their heirs was to continue only for such time as the objects of the trust required it; & the power to lease was a power only, to be exercised during the continuance of this estate so limited to them; & therefore (2) the three grandchildren of testator did not take a fee in the premises in question, but took estates for life only as tenants in common.—DOE d. All testator's brothers & sisters referred to survived him, but died before his widow, some of them leaving children, who with their issue were living at the death of testator's widow:—Held: none of such issue of the children of deceased brothers & sisters could take in competition with their own parents.—POWELL v. POWELL (1873), 28 L. 8556. ——.]—Testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust on the death of the survivor of his wife & four daughters to divide the same unto, between, & amongst the issue then living of his daughters in equal shares according to the parent stock & not the number of the individual objects, to the intent that the issue then living of any one of his daughters might be entitled to a share equal to that which the issue, if any, of any other of them should be entitled to, & in case there should be issue then living of only one of them his daughters, then the whole to be paid to or equally divided amongst such issue. At the death of the survivor of testator's wife & daughters there were living children or issue of all the daughters:—Held: according to the plain & unambiguous words of the original gift there was a gift to the issue of the daughters per stirpes & not per capita, children not taking concurrently with their parents, & the ambiguous words of the gift over in the particular event of there being issue living of only one of the daughters ought not to be allowed to affect the construction of the clear original gift.—Re RAWLINSON, HILL v. WITHALL, [1909] 2 Ch. 36; 78 L. At the time of the death of the tenant for life there were living one cousin of testator, a child of one of the uncles named in the will, & children & other issue of fifteen deceased cousins, children of the other uncle & of the four aunts named in the will:—Held: the words "according to the stocks" applied to the descendants of cousins, & not to the cousins themselves, & the fund was divisible into sixteen shares.—Re WILSON, PARKER v. WINDER (1883), 24 Ch. 8563. ——.]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate as follows. "As to the residue of my fortune I will & desire that the descendants or representatives of each of my first cousins deceased, partake in equal shares & proportions with my first cousins now alive." The residue is divisible per stirpes, amongst the first cousins, who were living at testator's death, & such of the descendants of his first cousins, who died before him as were next of kin of deceased first cousins & living at the time of the death of testator.—ROWLAND v. GORSUCH, PRICE v. GORSUCH (1789), 2 Cox, Eq. 8565. —— .]—A. devised a reversionary estate to S. T. & A. L. as tenants in common in fee; & in case both or either of them should happen to die in the lifetime of T. H., who had an estate for life in the premises, then the share or shares of her or them so dying to go "unto all & every such child & children, grandchild & grandchildren, of S. T. & A. L. respectively, as should be living at the time of her or their decease, & to the issue of such of them as should be then dead & have left issue, & to his, her, & their respective heirs, as tenants in common: yet, nevertheless, so as all the descendants of S. T. should together be entitled only to one moiety of the premises, & all the descendants of A. L. should together be entitled to no more than the other moiety thereof, & that none of such descendants, either of S. T. or A. L., should be entitled to any greater or other share of the respective moieties of the respective premises, than his, her, or their father or mother would have been entitled to, if living"; under this devise the grandchildren of S. T. & A. L. though in esse at the date of the will, can only take per stirpes, & not per capita, in substitution of such of their parents respectively as happened to be dead at the determination of T. H.'s life estate.—LEGARD v. HAWORTH, LEGARD v. ASPINALL (1800), 1 East, 120; 102 E. R. 48.

8566. ——.]—Under a devise of the residue of a real & personal estate, subject to the payment of debts & legacies, to testator's son & daughter, their heirs & assigns for ever, as tenants in common, & not as joint tenants; but in case of the death of either leaving child or children, the share of him or her so dying to go to his or her child or children; or if all such should die before twenty-one, such share to go to the survivor of the son or daughter for ever: but in case his son & daughter should be both dead at the time of testator's decease, without child or children, or leaving child or children, all of them should die under twenty-one & unmarried, & without child or children; then he gave the whole of his real & personal estate to his exors., upon certain trusts for other branches of his family: & then the will proceeded, as to the rest & residue of his estate & effects, in case of the death of his son & daughter at the time before mentioned, & without child or children, & other the events aforesaid; then he gave the same to his brother in fee:—Held: the limitation to the children of the deceased son or daughter, or to the survivor of the two, was only a substitution in case of a lapse by the death of testator's son or daughter in his lifetime; so if both son & daughter survived him, he intended them to take the fee as tenants in common: if one died in his lifetime & left issue, such issue was to take the parent's share; or if there should be no such issue which should attain twenty-one, the survivor of the son & daughter should take the whole: or if both died in his lifetime, & either left issue, such issue was to take; but if both died without issue in his lifetime, then the exors. were to take on the trusts mentioned; remainder to his brother in fee.—DOE d. 8577. ——.] — Testator bequeathed to his daughter a perpetual annuity of £250 a year. By a codicil, he directed that, instead of the money being paid to her, it should be paid to trustees for her, & he proceeded thus: "After my daughter C.'s death, I give the above money to be divided as follows: To her sister Anna M. £100 a year, & all the rest to be equally divided between her other brothers & sisters or their children." All her brothers & sisters predeceased C. :—Held: the grandchildren, who survived their parents, took by substitution; & they took per stirpes.—TIMINS v. STACKHOUSE (1858), 27 Beav. 434; 54 E. R. 170.

8578. ——.]—Upon the construction of a will & codicil, the word "cousins" was held to mean "first cousins," & the word "issue" to mean "children of first cousins"; & the children of first cousins were declared entitled to take per stirpes & not per capita.—STEVENSON v. ABINGDON (1862), 31 Beav. 305; 6 L. 8579. ——.]—Testator gave his residue to his grandchildren, the children of his son & daughter, A. & B., living at his decease, with a gift over to his brothers & sisters, in case any died before attaining a vested interest. By a codicil, he gave £4,000, the interest to be paid " in equal moieties " to A. & B. " during their lives, & at their decease the sum of £4,000 to be for the benefit of his grandchildren, agreeably to the instructions contained in his will." A. died, living B. :—Held : a moiety of the £4,000 became, upon the death of A., divisible amongst his children.

Where a testator gives property to his children as tenants in common, or directs that upon their death the property shall go over to their children, it is not merely a division of the fund in the first instance among the children as tenants in common, but also that their children take per stirpes the share which the parent would have taken (ROMILLY, M.R.).—ARCHER v. LEGG (1862), 31 Beav. 187 ; 10 W. 8581. ——.]—Real estate was devised upon trust, after the death of the tenant for life, to sell & divide the proceeds " equally among such of testator's five daughters as should be living at the decease of the life tenant, & the children, grandchildren & issue of such of his daughters as should then be dead ; such children, grandchildren & issue respectively to take & have equally amongst them, if more than one, the part or share which their, his or her parent respectively would have been entitled to had such parent been then living." One of the daughters, whose share was now in question, died before the tenant for life, having had ten children, of whom three survived the period of distribution, the other seven having died before that period, some with, others without, issue :—Held : (1) the gift to the children, grandchildren & issue was an original gift, & the share was divisible into tenths, & one-tenth went to each stock, irrespectively of the objects of gift surviving the mother or the period of distribution ; (2) the gift was per stirpes, not per capita.—Re ORTON'S TRUST (1866), L. R. had six children, two only of whom were living at the date of the will. The other four all left children :—Held : the proceeds of the real estate were divisible into six equal parts, of which two went to the surviving children of R., & the other four to the children per stirpes of the four children of R. who had died before the date of the will.—Re SIBLEY'S TRUSTS (1877), 5 Ch. 8584. ——.]—Testator by a codicil to his will bequeathed to the widow of his deceased son the interest accruing from a sum of money, the payment thereof to cease upon her death or second marriage. He directed his exors. to divide the principal sum " amongst my surviving male & female children. Should a male or female child's death precede mine, his or her share to be divided equally between the male & female children of such son & daughter deceased." One son & two daughters of testator were dead at the date of the codicil ; the two daughters each left one child. Eight children of the testator survived him :—Held : the class of persons entitled under the gift were children of testator living at his death, & per stirpes, the children living at his death of any child of testator who had predeceased him, whether before or after the date of the codicil ; consequently the fund was divisible into tenths amongst the eight surviving children of testator & the children of the two daughters who died in his lifetime.—MILES v. TUDWAY (1883), 49 L. T., all his houses situate in W., each to have one-half, to be share & share alike & what debt he should owe at his decease, they should pay both of them a like share of the same. All the above premises he gave, devised & bequeathed unto his niece, C. B., & nephew, J. T. each to enjoy one-half during their lives, & at their decease the premises to go to their children.

J. T., testator's heir-at-law, went to sea about 1804 & was never afterwards heard of. C. B., J. T.'s heir-at-law, died in 1843, leaving five children & four grandchildren of a deceased child, surviving her. She devised & bequeathed all her estate in the property to her four grandchildren:—Held: there was an absolute division of the property into two shares; (1) C. B. took a life estate in one moiety, which, after her death, went to her children & grandchildren as joint tenants in fee, per stirpes & not per capita; (2) J. 8612. —— —— ——.]—Testator gave property to trustees, upon trust to pay the income thereof to his widow for her life, & after her death to his daughter for life, &, after the daughter's death, to hold the property in trust for her "issue" as she should appoint, &, in default of appointment, in trust for her "children." The hotchpot clause & other provisions of the will also made a clear distinction between the "children" & the "issue" of the daughter, & the will provided that if there should be no child of the daughter who should become entitled to a vested interest, then, from & after her decease & such default or failure of children the property should be held "In trust for such of the class of persons following, namely, any brothers & sisters living at the death of the survivor of my wife & daughter, & the issue then living of my brothers & sisters dying in the lifetime of the survivor of my wife & daughter, as shall attain the age of twenty-one years, distributively, yet so that the issue shall participate only as representing their deceased parents." The residue was given "Upon trust for such of the class of persons following, namely, my brothers, & sisters & the brothers & sisters of my wife living at the death of the survivor of my wife & daughter, & the issue then living of my brothers & sisters & the brothers & sisters of my wife & dying in the lifetime of my wife & daughter, who shall attain the age of twenty-one years, distributively, yet so that the issue shall participate only as representing their deceased parents." The widow & daughter survived testator, & the daughter survived the widow without having been married:—Held: on the construction of these two trusts, if there had been no previous context to the contrary, the effect of the provision that issue were to represent their deceased "parents" would probably have been such a context as to confine "issue" to children; but, having regard to the very careful distinction between "children" & "issue" in the earlier parts of the will, the word "issue" in the two later gifts included grandchildren as well as children; nephews & nieces of the widow whose parents died before the date of the will were entitled to share; & persons descended both from a collateral of testator & a collateral of his widow would together take the two shares which their two deceased parents would have taken.—Re BURNHAM, CARRICK v. CARRICK, [1918] 2 Ch. 196; 87 L. He afterwards directed that any money which might be paid into the bank on account of such portions should be for the equal benefit of his daughters:—Held: (1) testator used the word "accumulation" as meaning not the addition of income to the capital, but the constant addition of fresh amounts from the profits de anno in annum arising from the residue, whether given in a will or in a combined will & codicil, & the construction of a particular residuary gift is not affected by the presence or absence of a general residuary gift.—BALL v. CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION (RECTOR & CHURCHWARDENS), 5 O. R. 386.—CAN.

The wife, by her will, appointed £100 to the eldest son of the marriage, & the remaining £7,900 to the other children of the marriage, directing the shares to vest in sons on their attaining twenty-one, & in daughters on their attaining that age or marriage with their father's consent; she, likewise, created a further charge, in order that each younger child's share of the £8,000 might be augmented to £5,000; & by the same instrument she, in exercise of a power of appointment, which she had under the will of C., appointed C.'s residuary property to the first & other sons of the marriage successively, who should attain twenty-one; & if there were no such sons, to the daughters of the marriage who should attain twenty-one. Afterwards, by a codicil, she directed that the same fortune should be given to any child or children of whom she might be delivered, as was given by her will to each of her daughters & that if no son of the marriage should live to attain twenty-one or be married, each of her daughters should be entitled to have for her fortune £10,000, to be paid in the manner & at the times mentioned in her marriage settlement or will respecting the fortunes of her daughters. The wife died in the husband's lifetime, leaving a son & three daughters her surviving; & in the events which happened, two daughters, the only surviving children of the marriage, became entitled under the settlement to the £4,000, & under their mother's appointment, to the residuary property of C.:—Held: they were entitled to receive £10,000 exclusive of, & in addition to, their shares of the £4,000, & of the residuary property of C.—WHYTE v. KEARNEY (1827), 3 Russ. 208; 6 L. 8654. ——.]—By her will testatrix gave £1,000 stock to trustees, upon trust to apply the dividends for the maintenance of her granddaughter until she attained twenty-two, & then in trust for her absolutely; but if she died under twenty-two, then in trust for testatrix's children living at the granddaughter's death. By a codicil testatrix revoked the above trusts, & in lieu thereof, directed the trustees to apply the dividends for the maintenance of the granddaughter until she attained twenty-two, & then in trust for her for life for her separate use; & in the event of her dying either above or under twenty-two leaving lawful issue, in trust for her children equally; but if she died without leaving lawful issue, then in trust for testatrix's children living at the granddaughter's death, & the children of any child who had previously died. By a subsequent codicil testatrix declared that she had altered her views respecting her granddaughter as to the £1,000 left in the will, which, testatrix now thought, might prove a snare for her, & testatrix left £500 for schooling & board:—Held: the legacy of £500 was given in addition to & not in substitution for that of £1,000 given by the codicil.—SAWREY v. RUMNEY (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 698; 19 L. for two legacies of greater amount given to the same party by a previous will & codicil.

If an incomplete testamentary paper, made before Jan. 1, 1838, contains internal evidence of an intention to make an entirely new disposition, & for that purpose to undo all that had been done by a previous complete will, the ct. will give effect to the new disposition as far as it goes, in substitution for the former, but will treat the former one as operative so far as no substituted disposition is provided in its place.

When the testamentary papers of which probate is granted appear to give several legacies to the same persons, it is often extremely difficult to ascertain what was the real intention of testator; & to attain that object as far as possible, certain rules have been laid down & nice distinctions taken; but such rules & distinctions are applicable only to cases in which there is no internal evidence of intention; for where that is to be found, it must prevail (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—KIDD v. NORTH (1846), 2 Ph. 91; 16 L. Testator gave by his will, "to my natural or reputed daughter, M. S., £2,000, for her own sole & separate use, the interest thereof, at 5 per cent., to be expended on her education"; & entrusted the care & charge of her to his brother. In a codicil, executed five years afterwards, he said, "I add £3,000 to the £2,000 to which M. S. is entitled under my will, by which she becomes entitled to £5,000." In about a year afterwards, & about ten days before his death, he made a further codicil, in which he said, "Not having time to alter my will, & to guard against any risk, I hereby charge the whole of my estates & property in the funds with the sum of £20,000 for my daughter, M. 8701. —— ——.]—Where testator leaves two testamentary instruments, & in both has given a legacy simpliciter to the same person, the ct., considering that he who has twice given, must, primâ facie, be intended to mean two gifts, awards to the legatee both legacies; & it is indifferent whether the second legacy is of the same amount, or less, or larger, than the first. But if in such two instruments the legacies are not given simpliciter, but the motive of the gift is expressed, & in both instruments the same motive is expressed, & the same sum is given, the ct. considers these two coincidences as raising a presumption that testator did not by the second instrument mean a second gift, but meant only a repetition of the former gift. The ct. raises this presumption only where the double coincidence occurs, of the same motive, & the same sum, in both instruments. It will not raise it, if in either instrument there be no motive, or a different motive, expressed, although the sums be the same; nor will it raise it, if the same motive be expressed in both instruments, & the sums be different. The presumption cannot therefore be raised in this case, although it be admitted that the motives are the same, inasmuch as the sums are different, & upon the face of these instruments the deft. is entitled to both sums (LEACH, V.-C.).—HURST v. BEACH (1821), 5 Madd. 351: 56 E. 8703. —— Second gift explaining first.]—Legacies nearly similar given to the same persons by different instruments; legatees not entitled to both. Bequest to A. his exors. & administrators, desiring him to dispose in such charities as he thinks fit, recommending poor clergymen with large families & good characters: A. died nine years before testatrix, who had notice of that: executed by the ct. by reference to the Master to settle a plan having particular regard to that recommendation.

It is impossible now to lay down a rule of discretion, without departing from the cases which have established first, that the second instrument is additional to the first, because primâ facie there is no reason why the second instrument should be made, unless the intention was to add to the first; but this of course must be checked by this, that if there is evidence, that instead of addition it was intended simply as repetition, it is not additional (LORD THURLOW, C.).—MOGGRIDGE v. THACKWELL (1792), 3 Bro. After the decease of his widow, a disposition was made of the property, & amongst other gifts there was one of the dividends of £1,000 stock to A. for life :—Held: the annuity to A. ceased upon the death of the widow, & A. then took the dividends on the £1,000 in substitution.—ADNAM v. COLE (1843), 6 Beav. 353; 49 E. 8706. —— ——.]—Bequest of an annuity of £800 to testator's wife, followed by a bequest, among others, of an annuity of £200 to testator's daughter, & a subsequent direction, in the same instrument, that at the death of testator's wife the daughter was to have £400 a year :—Held: the annuity of £400 given to the daughter was in substitution for, & not in addition to, the prior annuity of £200 given to the same legatee.—YOCKNEY v. HANSARD (1844), 3 Hare, 620; 8 Jur. 822; 67 E. R. 527.

8707. Second gift expressly in substitution.] Testator by his will bequeathed a legacy of £70,000 to trustees upon certain trusts in favour of one of his adopted daughters therein named, & a legacy of £80,000 upon similar trusts in favour of another adopted daughter, also named; & after declaring that the terms "the residuary legatees" thereinafter used should be considered to designate all persons thereinbefore named as pecuniary legatees, he bequeathed his residuary estate in trust for, & to be divided among, "the residuary legatees" pro rata in proportion to the amounts of the legacies thereinbefore bequeathed to "the said residuary legatees" respectively. By a codicil, testator, revoked the legacy of £70,000 given by the will, & "in substitution for & not in addition to" same, gave to his trustees the sum of £80,000 upon the same trusts as those declared in the will concerning the revoked legacy of £70,000, & "in the same manner as if they were there repeated"; & in terms substantially identical testator revoked the legacy of £80,000 given by the will, & gave a legacy of £140,000, "in substitution for & not in addition to" the revoked legacy of £80,000. A question arose as to whether, in the division of the residuary estate, any & what share of it should be allotted in respect of the two increased legacies, or in respect of the two for which they were substituted:—Held: in the absence of authority, the fullest meaning must be given to the words "in substitution for & not in addition to," & reading the will & codicil together, the effect was as if testator had directed that the increased legacies should be read as if they were inserted in the will for all purposes; & the residue must be divided amongst the legatees as if their original legacies had been the amounts mentioned in the codicil, & not in the will.—Re COURTAULD, COURTAULD v. CAWSTON (1882), 47 L. In 1877 the testatrix died & in 1880 the B. park estate passed to her niece for life. She died in 1899, leaving her husband H. B., the second baron P., & five sons. The eldest having died without issue the second son, H. B. P., succeeded to the B. park estate for his life, & on his becoming entitled to the barony on Oct. 16, 1919, the B. park estate went over under the shifting clause to the person or persons entitled next in remainder under the limitations of the will:—Held: upon the true construction of the limitations, in the event which had happened, the three younger brothers of H. 8724. "All & every other the issue."]—At the dates, respectively, of his will & death testator had living one son & one daughter. The son had then living two sons, F. & R., & three daughters, E., J., & S. Testator had also then living four grandchildren, issue of a deceased daughter. By his will he devised his real estates to his son for life, with remainder to his son's eldest son F. for life, with remainder to the first & other sons of F. successively in tail male; &, for default of such issue, to R., his son's second son, for life, with remainder to R.'s first & other sons successively in tail male; & for default of such issue to the third, fourth, & other sons of his son thereafter to be born, successively in tail male; & in default of such issue, to his daughter for life, with remainder to her first & other sons successively in tail male; & for default of such issue to his granddaughter E. for life, with remainder to her first & other sons successively in tail male; & for default of such issue, to his granddaughter J. for life, with remainder to her first & other sons successively in tail male; & for default of such issue to his granddaughter S. for life, with remainder to her first & other sons successively in tail male; & for default of such issue, to all & every the fourth, fifth, & every other daughter & daughters of his son successively & in remainder one after another, & the heirs male of their bodies; "& for default of such issue, to the use & behoof of all & every other issue of my body lawfully to be begotten; & for default of such issue, to the use & behoof of my own right heirs for ever":

In this will testator expressed a wish that his estates should be preserved in the hands of one person, & should not be dispersed; & he directed that any female who might inherit thereunder should, if married, with her husband, assume testator's name & arms only, or forfeit the estates; & he directed that an iron muniment chest should "go to the person entitled to the real estates from time to time." F., the eldest son of testator's son, having come into possession of the estates, executed a disentailing deed, & devised the estates to deft. for life, with remainder to his sons successively in tail male:—Held: the words "all & every" do not import that "all & every" are to take at the same time, but are well satisfied by all taking in succession.—ALLGOOD v. BLAKE, ROACH v. BLAKE, REED v. BLAKE (1873), L. 8727. —— Gift to class for life.]—The testatrix, Miss R., had a brother a widower advanced in life, who had assumed the name of R. G. & had two children, one a bachelor of unsound mind, the other a daughter. By her will she bequeathed a fund to trustees in trust to pay the income to her brother for life, to his son for life, & from & after the decease of both of them, upon trust to pay the income, "for life unto any immediate or direct descendants of my brother or nephew who shall bear the name of R. G. only & from & after his or her decease, or in case of failure of any such immediate or direct descendant of my brother or nephew who shall bear the name of R. G. only," upon trust for certain specified charitable societies. There was a clause for determining the interests of any descendants who after becoming entitled to the receipt of the income should abandon the name of R. G. Before the death of the nephew, a son born after the death of testatrix, of the daughter of testatrix's brother, assumed by royal licence the name of R. G. & at the decease of the survivor of the brother & nephew there was no other descendant of either of them who bore that name:—Held: the limitation to descendants was a gift for life to descendants living at the determination of the life interests & bearing the name of R. 8729. Effect of rule—On meaning of children—Whether word of limitation or purchase.]—The rule in Wild's Case, No. 8728, ante, even if only a rule of construction, is not now to be departed from. It is consistent with that case that the primary sense of the word "children" is issue of the first generation. That primary sense is displaced when circumstances render the rule in Wild's Case, No. 8728, ante, applicable, on which the word becomes a word of limitation, & not of purchase. Testator by a will made in 1823, gave "the whole of my landed property, situate, etc., to my eldest son H. & to his children lawfully begotten. In case of his dying without issue male or female, I give the same landed property to my second son C. In case of C. dying without children or child lawfully begotten, I give the same landed property to my daughter H., & to her child or children lawfully begotten; & should she have no children, she shall have a power of bequeathing it to whomever she pleases. I do hereby give & leave a full discretionary power to each of my children arriving at the possession of this landed property, to dispose of it by their will & testament to one, or to each, of their children, in such manner & in such proportions as to each of them my children, shall seem meet, & right, & proper. My reason for this is that as there is a title of baronet in the family the eldest son ought to possess something more than the others, & also that I never wished to encourage disobedient children, therefore I leave the power of punishing or rewarding, as each of them coming into possession of the property, & having children, shall think right." H. never had a child. C. died during the life of his elder brother, but left a daughter. H. after entering into possession, disentailed the estate, & devised it to his wife's 8732. —— ——.]—The rule in Wild's Case, No. 8728, ante, is not applicable to personal estate.

Personalty was bequeathed to testator's daughter during her life, & at her death to her daughter & to the granddaughter's children, but if they should die without issue, then over. The granddaughter was unmarried at the dates of the will & of the testator's death, & had no child till after the death of testator's daughter:—Held: the granddaughter took a life interest in the subject-matter of the bequest, with remainder to her children.

The general rule that words in a will which create an estate tail in realty will give an absolute interest in personalty is founded upon the desire to give effect to the intention of testator so far as the rules of law will permit. But the rule ought not to prevail where it would entirely defeat the intention of testator & where without any violation of the rules of law, the intention of testator may be carried into effect (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—AUDSLEY v. HORN (1859), 1 De G. S. & the heirs male of their bodies in succession, & for want of such issue male then to the use of his daughter E. S., her heirs & assigns for ever; with a residuary clause in favour of J. S. Testator afterwards made a codicil, whereby he devised all his estates to his son J. S. & his children lawfully to be begotten, with power for him to settle the same by will or otherwise on such of them as he should think proper; & for default of such issue then to his daughter E. S., & her children lawfully to be begotten, with a similar power; & in default of such issue, to J. S. & E. At the time of making the codicil J. S. was married, but had no child:—Held: the codicil was to be construed independent of the will; & under the codicil J. m. Devise for life—Remainder to devisee's children—Whether estate tail created.]—Land was devised to D. for life "& to her children if any at her death," if no children to testator's son & daughter. D. had no children when the will was made:—Held: the devise to D. was not of an estate in tail, but on her death her children took the fee.—GRANT v. FULLER (1902), 33 S. C. R. 34.—CAN.

8738. —— ——.]—When there is a devise of land to "A. & his children," & at the time of the devise he has no child, the word "children" is primâ facie a word of limitation, & the first taker shall have an estate tail; if he has children, it is primâ facie a word of purchase, & gives a joint estate to him & his children as purchasers. But either of these constructions may be defeated by the plain intention of testator to be collected from the whole of the will.

Testatrix, in a holograph will, gave "in trust to my exors. for my niece M. & her children, all my Quendon Hall estates in Essex, provided she takes the name of Cranmer & arms, & her children, with my mansion house, furniture, plate, books, linen, etc., Archbishop Cranmer's portrait by Holbein, India cabinet, striking watch, & my diamond earrings as heirlooms with my estate." The niece died before testatrix, leaving several children:—Held: "children" was a word of flexible meaning, & on the whole context of this will it must be read as a word of limitation, so that the eldest son of the niece took an estate tail in the devised property.—BYNG v. BYNG (1862), 10 H. The wife survived testator & died without having married again, leaving testator's only two sons surviving, who had since attained twenty-five, but who had no issue:—Held: the sons took equitable estates tail according to the rule in Wild's Case, No. 8728, ante.—UNDERHILL v. RODEN (1876), 2 Ch.
